CRASH LAID TO ENGINE FAILURE

Flaming Wreckage of Bomber After Crash Near Cardington

Here are scenes at the Leroy Foust farm near Cardington, where a U. S.-made bombing plane, on its way to join the Royal Air Force in Britain, crashed yesterday afternoon, killing two airmen. Top left, the flaming wreckage. This picture was made by Lloyd Bowman, Cleveland Heights, who was driving near the scene of the crash at the time it happened. Top center, after the wreckage had cooled, but before the bodies of the two airmen were taken out of the debris. Top right, another shot of the flaming ship by Bowman. Lower left, Lloyd, Arthur, Earl and Ivan Foust, son of Leroy Foust, all eye-witnesses of the crash. Lower center a general view of the crash scene, showing the jam of cars on route 42. Lower right, Everett Foust, brother of the four other men, looks at the wreckage. He also saw the plane crash.

Big Bomber, Headed for England, Falls To Earth and Bursts Into Flames Near Cardington; Thousands at Scene of Crash Being Probed.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(UP)—Army air force officials said today that an inquiry would be started immediately into the crash of two bombers, one at Cardington, yesterday, and one at Dayton today, while en route to Montreal for delivery to the Royal Air Force.

BULLETIN

A second Lockheed-Hudson bomber, bound for Canada, crashed and burned during a take-off today at Patterson field, dispatches from Dayton said. The pilot and co-pilot escaped before the ship caught fire. The plane, a duplicate of the one that crashed south of Cardington yesterday afternoon, killing two pilots, was being ferried across the country for delivery to the British Royal Air Force.

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

A dozen eye-witnesses today blamed engine trouble for the crash of an 18-ton twin-motored Lockheed-Hudson bomber in a corn field 30 miles southwest of Mansfield in Morrow county yesterday afternoon, killing the two pilots who were ferrying the $150,000 ship to Canada for delivery to the British Royal Air Force.

Meanwhile, army officers and federal agents today poked cautiously in the scorched and twisted wreckage for some further clue to the cause of the crash.

The big all-metal ship left Patterson field at Dayton at 2:20 p. m. yesterday. An hour later its engines plunged nearly six feet into the earth 100 yards west of U. S. route 42 on the LeRoy Foust farm, two miles south of Cardington. A wall of flame shot 100 feet into the air as the heavily laden fuel tanks exploded.

Major Robert H. Baker, contact officer for the army's "ferry command" at Patterson field, identified the victims as First Lieut. R. F. Rush, Tucson, Ariz., and Second Lieut. N. L. Warner.

The plane, according to the officer, was en route to Montreal, Canada. He said it arrived at Dayton Wednesday from the Lockheed factory at Burbank, Calif., with a stop en route at El Paso, Tex.

The plane was flying northeasterly over the highway, along a course that has lately been much used by similar ships being ferried to Canada by British, Canadian and private pilots for delivery to the RAF.

James R. Harrington, Mansfield municipal airport manager, said approximately 35 planes bearing RAF markings have passed over Mansfield during the past few days, over the course which follows U. S. Route 42 to the lake region.

E. H. Briscoe of Columbus, Civil Aeronautics Authority official, headed a group of CAA investigators at the crash scene and the army dispatched its accident classification committee from Patterson field. They reached the scene about 7 p. m. yesterday.

Witnesses reported that the ship spiraled to earth and burst into flames after a series of explosions. Both bodies were burned beyond recognition.

Bits of wreckage lay scattered over an area of 400 square feet where it was hurled by the blasts.

Among this scattered debris were

(By Associated Press)

Japan's dream of conquest in the Pacific moved toward grim reality today with the reported mobilization of 1,000,000 men, while at sea her ships blanked out in silence and turned away from American shores.

In London, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told parliament that "certain defense measures in Malaya have already been enforced" to counter "the potential threat" of the Japanese occupation of French Indo-China.

The house of commons cheered when Eden said the British government had 'been in close touch with the United States government" on developments in the Far East.

British dispatches from Singapore said France's colony in the Orient ignored a recent offer of protection by Great Britain, the United States, China and the Dutch East Indies" against further encroachments from the outside."

In Rome, the authoritative Fascist Editor Virginio Gayda declared the Indo-China thrust was "the first episode" in Japan's "march to the south" and was undertaken in full agreement with the other Axis powers.

Dispatches from Saigon, French Indo-China, said concessions gained by Japan include the right to station warships in strategic Camranh bay, on the southeast Indo-Chinese coast, only 800 miles from Singapore.

Moreover, these reports said, the Japanese may station warships at the river port of Saigon, and obtain several air bases in southern Indo-China.

Foreign intelligence reports reaching Shanghai said the Japanese mobilization—the greatest since July 1937, when the war with China began—had been in progress

COUNTER-MOVE: U. S. Seen Cutting Oil Supply to Japan

BULLETIN

HYDE PARK, N. Y.—(AP)—President Roosevelt disclosed today that the United States would retaliate with specific action tomorrow against Japan's occupation of naval and air bases in French Indo-China.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Abandonment of the two-year-old policy of giving Japan access to United States oil in order to prevent aggressive action in the Pacific was considered a distinct possibility today, now that Japanese forces have moved southward to occupy strategic military and naval bases in French Indo-China.

Informed quarters here were agreed that extraordinary counter-measures were in the making as a result of the Indo-China affair—measures designed to express this country's opposition to the action already taken as well as to any further Japanese step in the direction of Singapore, the Netherlands East Indies or the Philippines.

Capitol Hill headed increasingly frequent speculation on use of the navy to safeguard American Far Eastern interests, while immediate prospects here were for some kind of economic action.

In this connection it was regarded as significant that Treasury Secretary Morgenthau cut short a visit with his parents in Bar Harbor, Me., to return to the capital today, explaining that the national emergency made it necessary for him to do so. In the past Morgenthau has been active in working out anti-Axis economic measures.

The possibility of an oil embargo arose after President Roosevelt in short blunt sentences—all phrases in the past tense—suddenly broke official silence on why the Japanese have been allowed to obtain American oil thus far.

Had the oil been cut off, he told a group of civilian defense work-

OFFER DRAFT COMPROMISE

Administration Leaders Put Out Feeler on One-Year Service Extension.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Administration leaders made known today a willingness to compromise on a one-year extension of military service for selectees, national guardsmen and reserves, if they were convinced such a move would increase congressional support for legislation to keep the present army intact.

Senator Hill, of Alabama, the Democratic whip, told reporters he would offer no objection to a "reasonable" restriction on the additional time citizen soldiers might be called upon to serve over the present one-year limit.

"If we can unify support behind the measure," Hill said, "I would be willing to accept a limitation of one year on additional

RAPS WHEELER

FDR Says Senator Goes 'Too Far' In Opposition.

HYDE PARK, N. Y.—(U.P.)—President Roosevelt asserted that Sen. Burton K. Wheeler has gone "too far" in his fight against administration international policies and is "on dangerous ground."

The president, at a press conference, backed up the charge of his secretary of war, Henry L. Stimson, that the Montana isolationist is "very near the line of subversive activities against the United States, if not treason."

Mr. Roosevelt, commenting on Wheeler's activities, said he agreed with the headings appearing above editorials on the senator which appeared this morning in the New York Times and the New York Herald-Tribune. They were entitled, he said, "On Dangerous Ground," and "Mr. Wheeler Goes Too Far."

Hitch-Hiker, 12, Ends Trip Here

Donald Donaghy is visiting Mansfield today after a four-day "thumbing" trip from Dorchester, Mass. Last night he slept in Central park and along Park avenue west and now he's ready to go back to the Dorchester state home where he lives.

Boy, 12, Hitches 730 Miles of Rides to Land In Mansfield

Mansfield has a 12-year-old Bostonian visitor today who thumbed his way 730 miles to Mansfield in four days.

Last night he slept in Central park and under a tree on Park avenue west.

Ralph Offerle, 369 McPherson street, service station attendant, noticed the lad on his way to work and awakened him. The boy gave his name as Donald Donahgy, "just a hitch-hiker."

After that things began to happen rapidly—even for a vagabond. Donald was given a bath in the wash room of the service station where Offerle works and treated to breakfast, his first meal, he said, since Tuesday.

The youthful traveler said he had run away from a state home for boys runby Mrs. Elizabeth Carren in Dorchester, Mass.—"It's right on the outskirts of Boston."

This, he admitted, is the second time he's run away from home. Once before he ran away from his mother and step-father, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Sadler, North Dartmouth, Mass.

This morning Donald was hungry. Offerle remarked that it's been a long time since he's seen anyone get such relish from a bottle of milk and a cake. And this hunger is liable to show Donald the error of his ways.

State patrolmen, to whom he was taken, explained the joys of three meals a day to Donald and when they finished he was quite ready to be sent back to the state home in Dorchester.

PLAN $225,000 AIRPORT BONDS

Chamber of Commerce Group To Recommend Popular Vote on November Ballot.

Already backed by a large number of civic organizations and lodges, the aviation committee of the Mansfield Chamber of Commerce today prepared to recommend to Mansfield city council the submission of a $225,000 airport improvement bond issue to the Mansfield electorate.

Declaring it is time for Mansfield to prepare for "big time aviation, for air mail, air freight and extensive passenger traffic," Dr. L. D. Bonar, aviation committee chairman, said the committee's plans call for submission of the issue on the November ballot.

Announcement of the committee's intentions came last night at a meeting of about 40 representatives of civic organizations. They were gathered in the Chamber of Commerce assembly rooms at the request of the Junior Association of Commerce whose aviation committee compiled an exhaustive re-

State Orders County To Send New Quota of Draftees.

Two of Richland county's three selective service boards were asked today to send five selectees to the Fort Hayes induction station in the 24th draft call due soon after Aug. 12.

Board 1 received a call for three men and Board 3 for two selectees. The call will take 431 selectees from the state.

The next group of men to leave Richland county will go to Fort Hayes Aug. 11. There will be more than 40 in that contingent.

Cleveland Decides to Copy City's Safetytown Program

Launched four years ago as an experiment for teaching children of pre-school age their traffic ABC'S, Mansfield's own "Safetytown" project within the next few weeks will be started in Cleveland as a part of that city's traffic education program.

Adoption of the playlot kindergarten idea as a means of training youngsters in the fundamentals of traffic safety was virtually assured a group of women here yesterday by Frank E. Bubna, Cleveland properties director.

Bubna told the women, the public affairs committee of Cleveland which had come to Mansfield to inspect the project in operation, that two projects would be esablished in that city this summer.

Speaking to the group at a luncheon meeting at the Mansfield-Leland hotel Bubna said:

"If sound traffic habits can be taught by the method Mansfield is using, it certainly can be used to a good advantage in Cleveland."

He asked the group of nearly 60 women who made the trip here as part of a motor caravan of 20 automobiles for their support of the project.

Made First Crash Pix, Tells Story

A graphic eye-witness description of the crash in Morrow county yesterday afternoon of the huge Lockheed-Hudson all-metal bomber bound for Britain was given late yesterday afternoon by Lloyd R. Bowman, Cleveland structural engineer.

Bowman, returning home from a vacation, was driving along U. S. route 42 when the $150,000 plane plunged to earth in a nearby field and burst into flames, killing the two pilots.

Grabbing up his camera from his automobile he snapped several pictures, called the Cardington marshal, and hurried to The News-Journal office to give the first eye-witness account of the crash. Two of the pictures taken by him appear in today's News-Journal.

His story gave The News-Journal the first detailed account of the bomber's crash, although when he saw the plane fall, Bowman did not know that it was an RAF bomber, nor how many men were in it. Intensity of the flames kept him at a distance.

"I heard a plane flying low over my car," he said. "The motors were spitting and sput-

Four Tons of Pots And Pans Already In Aluminum Dump

With more than four tons of old aluminum pots and pans already gathered in Mansfield's drive to aid national defense, campaign officials today predicted that at least seven tons would be collected by tomorrow night.

Collections must still be made from the Fifth ward today and the Sixth ward tomorrow. James F. Carrigan, city chairman, announced today that the drive had been a "huge success" and that he expected the aluminum dump near Central park would be filled to an overflowing point.

County Agent George B. Ganyard, director of the rural drive, mustered his forces today to transport collections from various communities throughout the county to the central dump in the city.

Yesterday's free motion picture show at the Ritz theater brought in 800 more pieces of aluminum,

WARM WEEK-END

Thundershowers Expected But Mercury Will Stay Up.

Mansfielders are due for a sweltering week-end with the temperatures in the 90's, the weatherman predicted today.

There is a chance that thundershowers will bring relief by Saturday afternoon in scattered sections of Ohio, but they were not expected to end the heat wave which sent the mercury up to 93 in Mansfield yesterday, second highest of the year.

Except for the possibility of light showers, the weather will continue fair and warm at least until Sunday, the forecast said.

Mansfield's top of 93 degrees was exceeded yesterday at a number of other points in the state where the temperature moved up to 95 or higher.

CRASH OF RAF BOMBER LAID TO ENGINE FAILURE

Two Bodies Removed From Wreckage of Plane Which Fell Near Cardington.

flares, the cap blown from a gasoline tank, and indistinguishable bits of fuselage.

The main body of the wreckage, a mass of burned and twisted metal, lay at the west edge of the field.

The motors of the plane were completely buried in the ground. On the surface of the right wing still partly intact was the scorched insignia of the RAF, a large red dot surrounded by a blue circle.

The field where the plane crashed is about a quarter of a mile long. It is only 100 feet wide at the south end and about 400 feet wide at the north end. It lays parallel to the highway.

Crowds estimated at upwards to 10,000 persons jammed the area for hours after the crash. Ropes held them back from the wreckage and from fire-fighting and ambulance equipment.

Automobiles lined the highway for nearly two miles on either side of the Foust farm.

One of the first witnesses to notice that the plane was in trouble was Arthur Foust, 39, whose father owns the farm where the crash occurred.

Foust was working in an oats field about three-quarters of a mile south of the scene.

He said:

"I looked up as most everybody does when he hears an airplane, even if we are getting used to them.

"It seemed it was wobbling. Then I noticed that the motor seemed to die out and start up again with backfiring like an automobile does sometimes. Each time it backfired it seem to drop quite a bit."

Faust estimated the plane was about 2500 feet up when he first saw it.

He said he watched it proceed northward over the highway and that suddenly it disappeared and he thought it was falling on his parents' house, or in the yard where a threshing crew was at work.

Working with Arthur was another brother, Ivan, 19, youngest Foust son. He said that when he first saw the plane it was flying north at what he estimated about 1,500 feet.

"All of a sudden," said Ivan, "it went into a spin and turned over three or four times."

Earl Foust, 22, another brother said "I could see men in the plane as it went down, but I couldn't tell how many there were."

Foust, who was threshing with his sons and approximately 10 neighbors at the barn less than 500 yards from where the plane crashed, said:

"I heard a hissing noise and ran outside the barn door just in time to see the plane dive into the pasture and explode. Flames, apparently from burning gasoline, flew 100 yards over into the cornfield."

Foust said he and some of the other men ran toward the plane but saw they could do nothing. Then Foust called the Cardington fire department.

"There was one big explosion when the plane hit," Foust reported. "Three or four minutes later there was another explosion, and then several other lesser ones."

Foust's oldest son, Everett, 34, said he was standing outside the barn when he saw the plane coming down.

"It looked to me like something was wrong with the motor," he said. "The plane made a sort of big spiral and swept toward us. I thought it was going to hit the barn and yelled to my brothers and the other men to get out.

"Almost while I was still yelling," he went on, "the plane crashed in the pasture. It's motors were roaring at the time."

Mrs. Foust, who was in the house at the time of the crash, said that she and a neighbor, Mrs. Webb Hubbel, both 60, had just finished clearing the kitchen after the threshing dinner and had gone into the living room when they heard the plane.

"It made a terrible rumble," she said. "I thought it was going to take the roof of the house off. We ran outside just as the explosions came. They shook everything and even made the windows rattle."

Mrs. Agnes Palmer, 62, a native of England, said that she was in her cottage across the road from the Foust farm when she heard the plane. Her story was much similar to that of the Fousts.

All agreed that the crash occurred shortly before 3:30 p. m.

R. E. Sanderson, chief of the Cardington volunteer fire department said:

"I got the call sometime after three. Six of the department came along. We brought the pumper and got here at about 3:30 p. m. There wasn't much we could do. Gasoline was still exploding and white hot aluminum was flying in all directions. Chemicals were useless, but we pumped water from the run at the foot of the pasture and kept the blaze from spreading into the corn.

"The wreckage kept smoldering for two hours."

Patrolman W. C. Corder, on guard at the wreckage, said his sub-station at Marion was notified of the crash and that the Findlay station, notified in turn, sent word to Wright Field, Dayton.

Patrolman Corder was first to identify the ship from a part of the plane's log book found in the wreckage. He said the number of the plane listed in the log was 1-0-1093.

The United Press reported that according to officers at Wright field, the pilots radioed the control tower that the ship's motors were "sputtering" and that they were going into a nose dive.

Eyewitnesses said that the plane "seemed to weave in the air" and apparently several attempts were made to gain altitude before it went into a tail-spin.

The decapitated bodies were not removed from the wreckage until nearly four hours after the crash.

Searchers found Rush's name on a circle of blue felt about four inches in diameter. It had been sewed on a fragment of uniform that was not destroyed.

On the same piece of felt there was embroidered a kicking mule which army officers identified as a Canadian emblem.

In the wreckage, investigators also found a silver bracelet to which was attached the silver wings of the U. S. air corps. On these were inscribed the name R. F. Rush and the date, "1938."

Seven Escape When Transport Burns

DAYTON—(UP)—Two officers and five enlisted men escaped death late yesterday when their Douglas DC-3 transport ship crashed at Patterson Field at approximately the same time a RAF Lockheed bomber dived into the ground near Cardington, O.

Witnesses said one of the ships motors caught fire and dropped from the plane while it was still in the air.

The plane was piloted by Second Lieut. Herbert D. Rish, Kenton, O., and Lieut. Walter Bridgers, Dayton, was co-pilot. Names of the five enlisted men were not disclosed.

tering. I stopped and got out. The plane was over my head about 400 feet in the air. I knew the ship was in trouble so I watched it closely. It was flying north or northwest.

"Apparently one of the engines was missing and the pilot was trying to gain altitude. A short distance ahead of us, the plane seemed to nose upward suddenly and then dip downward and head straight for the earth.

"I ran up there, but the plane was in flames before I got close. As I ran, there was an explosion. I saw pieces of the ship flying through the air. Flames leaped up, it seemed to me, about 100 feet toward the sky.

"The motors were buried in the ground about four or five feet. Both the wings were torn off. Debris was scattered all around.

"After the first big explosion, there were several smaller explosions. Seeing the flames, I knew I couldn't help anyone in the ship I ran to a farmhouse nearby, where people were threshing. They also had seen the crash. After calling the police, we ran back to the scene but by this time the plane was a blazing inferno."

Another eyewitness was Mrs. Nannie Palmer, 72, native of Thrapton, Northhamptonshire, England, whose tiny cottage stands just across the road from the Foust home within 300 yards of where the plane crashed.

"I had just turned down the wireless (radio) and happened to look out the kitchen window," Mrs. Palmer said, "when I saw the airship over Mr. Foust's barn. It was afire then, with flames shooting out.

"Then it rolled over like this"—and she rolled her two hands—"and went down behind the barn. I was afraid for the men, and I hurried over to get Mrs. Foust.

"They say it was on its way to England. It's too bad. My nephew Thomas has given his life in the war already.

"There were three explosions. It was dreadful. They scared me most of all and I nearly went to pieces.

"Mrs. Foust and I ran along the fence. She thought it was the machine in the barn. But we got down by the barn and there was the airship burning and the flames shooting nigh."

Cleveland Decides to Copy City's Safetytown Program

The group was greeted by Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton. Novelist Louis Bromfield, a guest, spoke briefly.

Before the delegation moved to Prospect park to see the "town" in operation, Patrolman Frend C. Boals, who originated the idea, outlined the program to the group.

He said he devised the system to train the child at an early age in the principles in road safety so that these principles would become automatic with him later in life.

"This program works along the same lines as the beginner in school learns to write," Boals said.

"After he is taught the fundamentals of writing, he practices it until it becomes a thing that is guided by his subconscious mind."

Previously the group heard A. F. Malo, traffic safety engineer for the Michigan state highway department, laud the "Safetytown" project as a means of teaching future generations better safety habits.

"Poor driving and walking habits constitute the chief causes of our traffic accidents today," he said.

"I can conceive of no better way to teach better safety habits than the education typified by Mansfield's "Safetytown."

Malo said that Gov. Murray D. Van Wagoner of Michigan was personally interested in the Safetytown project. He said he himself was looking forward "expectantly" to seeing more of the projects being inaugurated all over the country.

Following an inspection of the playlot, Capt. Arthur Roth, head of the Cleveland police department's juvenile bureau, told the women that "280,000 youngsters in Cleveland need this protection."

The cavalcade to Mansfield was headed by Mrs. E. F. Carron, past president of the Federated Women clubs of Cleveland ,and Mrs. Marie Hubbard Fry, chairman of the organization welfare and traffic committee.

Accompanying them were Margaret Mahoney, state representative of Cuyahoga county and Mrs. Bernice Pyke, United States collector of customs.

Parent-Teacher representatives included Miss Margaret Nolan, Sandusky, and Mrs. Alma Miller, Norwalk.

ers at the White House late yesterday, "they probably would have gone down to the Dutch East Indies a year ago, and you would have had war."

Widely considered to be among the most significant aspects of the president's statement was that it was put in the past tense. From his was drawn the generally accepted inference that since the Japanese have acted in Indo-China he might be ready to impose an oil embargo along with other strong economic measures.

The seriousness with which the United States views the Japanese step was made known officially yesterday in a statement by Sumner Welles, acting secretary of state, who branded the action as one of aggression and said it was taken to obtain bases for "further and more obvious movements of conquest in adjacent areas."

As a result, Welles said, these other areas, including the Philippines, now are endangered

Troop destinations were kept secret, but advance contingents were expected to occupy newly-won air and naval bases in southern French Indo-China on Sunday, and as one Hanoi newspaper put it:

"Indo-China is on the way to Singapore and the Netherlands East Indies."

In Berlin, authorized sources declared Japan has informed Germany she is determined to oppose by every means any British attempt on French Indo-China or any threat to Japan's "new order" in the Far East.

San Francisco reports said Japan, taking no chance of having her finest liners and cargo ships seized by the United States, clamped strict orders of radio silence on her vast merchant fleet, halted suddenly on the high seas.

Forty-two Japanese ships were reported marking time or turning back toward Japan. There were indications that one liner, the Tatuta Maru, was headed for a Mexican port. Other Japanese vessels in Pacific coast ports rushed loading operations for a quick getaway.

On the Russian-German war front, London reports said that Adolf Hitler's invasion armies had renewed the offensive along the entire line, but that there was "no decisive result gained by either side at any place."

Hitler's high command asserted the 34-day-old campaign was "proceeding according to plan," but it acknowledged stiff Red army resistance.

The Germans said a strong bunker group know as Emil Ezyn on the Stalin line, south of the Pinsk marshes, surrendered yesterday after a fierce, 24-hour battle.

A Soviet war bulletin said "stubborn" fighting raged all last night in five main sectors—on the Petrozavodsk front, north of Leningrad; on the Porkhev front, south of Leningrad; on the Polotsk-Nevel front, in the center; on the Smolensk front, where a deep German salient has been driven toward Moscow; and on the Zhitomir front, in the Ukraine.

All have been scenes of fierce, indecisive fighting for many days.

Red army troops defending the road to Moscow reported they had annihilated an entire German infantry division (about 15,000 men) near Smolensk, and the Soviet capital's air defenses were officially credited with beating off a fourth successive night assault by German warplanes.

Unlike the three previous raids, each lasting precisely 5½ hours, the Luftwaffe struck twice last night, from 9:45 p. m. to 11:10 p. m. and later in a two-hour attack.

An official Soviet announcement said that only one plane penetrated the capital's defenses and that it was shot down.

In the channel air war, RAF pilots reported they left great fires raging in the German naval bases of Kiel and Emden in night raids, and also attacked Wilhelmshaven and Rotterdam and airfields in German-occupied France. The German high command asserted 88 RAF planes were destroyed yesterday.

Premier Mussolini's high command said Italian planes sank three more ships totalling 37,000 tons in a British convoy in the Mediterranean yesterday after sinking five ships the day before.

In the Far East crisis, the authoritative Japan Times and Advertiser, organ of the Tokyo foreign office, set the pace for sharp press attacks on the United States.

The newspaper declared that "encirclement of Indo-China by Anglo-American and Chungking interests" had taken the form of "aerial, naval and military bases extending from India and Burma around to Malaya and the Philippines.

Major General Raishiro Sumita, chief of the Japanese military mission in Indo-China, was expected to arrive at Saigon tomorrow to direct the occupation which reports suggested would be begun with a contingent of more than 40,000 troops.

Both London and Hanoi reports said that Vichy and Tokyo had agreed to let Japan use bases in Indo-China and reports from Saigon indicated that the French were withdrawing their forces from the area to be occupied.

Extraordinary counter-measures to the Japanese move were hinted in Washington.

Informed sources in Washington said the U. S. government probably would bar all oil exports to Japan.

The serious view Washington took of far eastern developments was underlined by a statement by Sumner Welles, acting secretary of state, who called Japan's move on Indo-China one of aggression.

The Peruvian-Ecuadorean border dispute was still boiling after Ecuador charged that at least 3,000 Japanese soldiers had been seen in the Peruvian lines.

Peru replied with a complete denial of what it called "ridiculous and contemptible" charges.

Defense Moves In Malaya Reported

LONDON—(AP)—Foreign Minister Anthony Eden told parliament today that "certain measures in Malaya already have been enforced" to meet "the potential threat" of the Japanese occupation of French Indo-China.

The house of commons cheered when Eden said the British government had "been in close communication with the United States government" on the latest developments in the Far East.

He declined to discuss in detail "the measures which His Majesty's government have prepared to meet these and other possible developments," but promised a further statement at an early date.

Carrigan estimated. Today at 8 p. m., baseball fans will be admitted to the game between the Lima Pandas and the Mansfield Braves for ten cents and an aluminum contribution. Tonight will also be ladies' night and all women attending are requested to bring aluminum donations. Mansfield's Marine Corps will direct the admission and seating of attendants at the ball game.

Tomorrow night, a victory celebration will be held around the aluminum pile near Central park. Carrigan announced that the American Legion bugle and drum corps and the Marine corps will participate in the program. Members of the Junior Association of Commerce are aiding in making celebration arrangements.

service for these men. We want to see this bill passed by the greatest possible margin for its psychological effect both at home and abroad."

Hill's statement lent impetus to a move by two other military committee members, Senators Austin (R.-Vt,) and Gurney (R.-SD) to write a time clause into pending resolutions.

Austin, acting senate minority leader, said he favored a one-year extension but Gurney suggested that it might be well to permit operation of the proposed legislation to continue until June 30, 1943.

On the other hand, Senator Thomas (D.-Utah) said he thought the army ought to be authorized to retain the services of the citizen soldiers as long as the emergency might last and Chairman Reynolds (D.-SC) observed that it mght be difficult to fix a time limit if congress declared an emergency.

The declaration of such an emergency was sought in proposed legislation sent to the committee yesterday by Secretary of War Stimson. Committee members were called into closed session today to consider this and a half dozen other proposals.

Meanwhile a joint committee adjusted differences between senate and house on legislation calling for mandatory deferment of selectees 28 years old or older. Approval of both houses appeared to be assured. The bill probably will be called up in the house for action next week.

The same measure would give the president authority to seize defense plants when he finds that there is interruption of production which would interfere with the defense program.

ATTACK FLARES

Ecuador, Peru Troops Renew Border Hostilities.

LIMA, Peru—(INS)—Hostilities between Peru and Ecuador flared again today when Ecuadorean troops renewed attacks south of the Zarumilla river, it was announced here. The attackers were said to have been repulsed with heavy losses.

Several attempts were made to capture important Peruvian positions but Peruvian troops, supported by two flights of aircraft, repulsed every onslaught.

The governments of Peru and Ecuador again exchanged notes accusing one another of aggression. Reports circulated that Japanese troops are operating with the Peruvians were officially described as "ridiculous."

NEW LIBRARY BOOK TELLS OF MODERN ITALY

'Spurs on the Boot' by Morgan Now on Shelves; 'I Like Brazil' Also New.

Modern Italy from an economic, social, political and military standpoint is pictured by Thomas B. Morgan in "Spurs On the Boat," now available at the Mansfield Public Library.

The acts and antics of Italy's new masters are presented by the well-known observer who has based his story on material of the past 20 years and has kept it lively and entertaining.

Another country, America's neighbor to the south, is the subject of Jack Harding's "I Like Brazil," also a new library title. Harding found Brazil a vast and exciting country and presents an engaging account of people, places customs and industries that provides the key to Brazil's fascinating past and promising future.

Helen Judson, author of EDITH CAVELL, draws upon many previously untapped and intimate sources for her moving story of this indomitable, half-Puritan figure whose trial and subsequent execution in 1915 brought world attention to her remarkable work as a nurse in Belgium both before and during part of the War.

OTHER NON-FICTION: THAT MEN MAY UNDERSTAND by Rugg; MINIATURE MANUAL by Alfieri; WITH THE FOREIGN LEGION AT NARVIK by Lapie; OUR LATIN AMERICAN NEIGHBORS by Green; LET NO WAVE ENGULF US by Altschul; DIET IN SINUS INFECTIONS AND COLDS by Ullmann; OUR CONTEMPORARY COMPOSERS by Howard; HISTORY OF HUNGARY by Lukinich; AMERICAN BUSINESS IN A CHANGING WORLD by Zelomek and Shook; A POTTER'S BOOK by Leach.

Brigid Knight has chosen South Africa, a hundred years ago, for the setting of her new novel, WALKING THE WHIRLWIND. It is the story of Alison Harding, mistress of Ashenden, the farm which her father tried so hard to make English, and who, with an equal passion, loved her husband Andrew. Three generations of life-loving, full-blooded people march through this novel—Dutch, English and French—and their lives form a pageant of trading and wars, slaves, and above all, love and adventure.

NO MEASURE, DANCED by Harry Lee is built around the background of a modern department store. At the age of eighteen Lily Stagg is forced to help provide for her mother and a young brother and sister. Here also begins her struggle to gain some measure of the beauty, happiness and ease which she sees all around her. That Lily loses sight of the end in the means is her tragedy.

WHO FOUGHT AND BLED by Ralph Beebe is an American historical novel of the citizen soldiers in the wilderness campaigns of the war of 1812, who outlasted bitter defeat by the British and Indians to establish the Ohio country and Michigan territory as strongholds of Americanism. The two main characters, Roderick Hale, Boston gentleman and Harvard man, and Alijah Stark, western currier, rough, uncouth and strong are partners by chance in an Ohio "estate" and in war.

OTHER FICTION: HOLY SUBURB by Atkins; CASE OF MR. CASSIDY by Targ and Herman; ADVENTURE NORTH by Katherine Pinkerton—Ann and Philip Jackman with their father and mother went to Ontario where they expected to earn their living by trapping. The Indians interferred; but the family really did succeed at last in living in peace with these neighbors.

WITHOUT VALOR by Laura Long—When the Civil War began Richard Clayton wanted to join the Union army. He was not old enough to be a soldier, so he had to stay at home to manage the mill while his father was away in battle. It was hard to know who was a friend when the neighbors favored opposite sides. Dick learned a secret about his hero that he would rather not have known.

Tomorrow's the day for employes at the Sheet and Tin Plate company.

Approximately 3,500 employes and their families will attend the annual picnic at Greter's lake six miles west of Mansfield on U. S. Route 30-S.

Arriving around 10 a. m., picnickers can play and watch interdepartment baseball games during the forenoon.

J. M. Hill, Empire president, Joe Scanlon, delegate of the Steel Workers Organization Council and former Empire employe, and Myer Bernstein, SWOC delegate from Pittsburgh will address luncheoners at 1 p. m. The picnic will also honor Hill who is completing six years as president of the corporation.

Harry Boyer, general picnic chairman, said today that the picnic is sponsored jointly by Delano lodge of the CIO and Empire for the first time. Previously the lodge has sponsored the picnic with the cooperation of Empire management, but this year Boyer said the company would join with the lodge and help with the expenses.

Buses will leave Delano lodge, at 10:30 a. m., 11:30 and 12:30 to take Empire employes without other transportation to the picnic spot.

Motorists, he said, will find arrows marking the course, starting on Park avenue west and Springmill road.

Common Defense, General Welfare

ONE of the clearly stated purposes of the Constitution of the United States is to "provide for the common defense."

Acceptance of the privileges of citizenship requires sharing of responsibilities, and "the blessings of liberty" must sometimes be defended if they are to be preserved.

Individual freedom and preservation of minority rights have been so strongly, and properly, emphasized under our form of government that any direct exercise of power causes a shock.

That was the case a few weeks ago when the army was used to keep armament factories in operation, and the same attitude is recognized in opposition to extending the term of service of trainees.

However gently a governmental system may rest upon its people in normal peace-time functioning, there has never been a doubt in the minds of thoughtful citizens that, during a period of national emergency, the government (which is all the people) is entitled to first call on the services of its citizens—for either military or civilian tasks—and that personal desires, preferences and convenience must be temporarily sacrificed in behalf of the general welfare.

This idea of authority of government, and of the requirements of military discipline, is new to the thinking of many young people—and some older ones—as is evidenced by protests sent to congressmen by trainees who object to extension of their year of service—but a government that could not depend upon its people to rally for national defense, in time of peril, would be doomed.

Every American citizen is now called to some form of defense service—military or civilian—and it is on the earnestness and effectiveness of this service that the nation must depend for its preservation and for the maintenance of liberty for its people.

Move To Prevent Excessive Profits

PERHAPS because there is so much of interest that the public can't follow it all, little attention has been paid to the hearings before a senate committee looking into war profits. Officials of a shipyard corporation were testifying recently. One of them said that the company's profits on some government ship repairs had ranged as high as 40 per cent.

Another official then explained that the reason was the basing of charges on a smaller volume of work than was actually given the company. As soon as they realized how much work they were to handle they revised charges so that the profits on subsequent jobs would be only 10 per cent. The witness admitted, upon urging by counsel for the senate committee, that the first charges were "outrageous."

It was further explained that when they had talked of giving back some of the money, they had decided against it because of prospective heavy taxes. And finally, one of the company officials said, even the 40 per cent profits didn't compare with World war profits. Twenty-five years ago "if it hadn't been for taxes we couldn't have handled our profits with a steam shovel."

Excessive war profits constitute one of the developments of the war of 1917-1918 that the public is determined not to have repeated. This particular testimony seems to show that its determination may be fulfilled, in one way or another. It is necessary for the economic well-being of the whole country. And it is also a national duty, owed to the nation's $21-a-month defenders, to prevent profiteering.

Find Newspaper Advertising Best

ANNOUNCEMENT by Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation that 65 per cent of its $2,000,000 advertising budget for 1941-42 will be spent with newspapers, merits thoughtful consideration by all buyers of advertising—large or small.

This big motion picture company has been in position to experiment in various fields of advertising to a greater extent than is possible with smaller concerns, but the results of this experimentation are available for guidance of all other advertisers.

Here is what a representative of the company said, in announcing preference for newspaper advertising: "Extensive and detailed statistical surveys have proven time and again that newspaper advertising is the most potent medium existing."

While some other forms of advertising appear to make temporary appeal, it has been universal experience that consistent newspaper advertising is essential to successful operation of business.

Against Municipal Plant

VOTERS in the village of Plymouth decided, by a substantial majority, against building a municipal electric light plant.

This is a subject that comes up, from time to time, in practically every community—always with a division of public sentiment, usually influenced by quality of service and rates.

While in some instances municipally owned and operated utilities have appeared to effect savings for consumers, analysis has shown that in most instances this was effected through freedom from taxes and investment costs instead of economy or efficiency in operation.

Except as a measure to guard against excessive rates, municipal ownership and political operation of utilities has seldom justified the experiment.

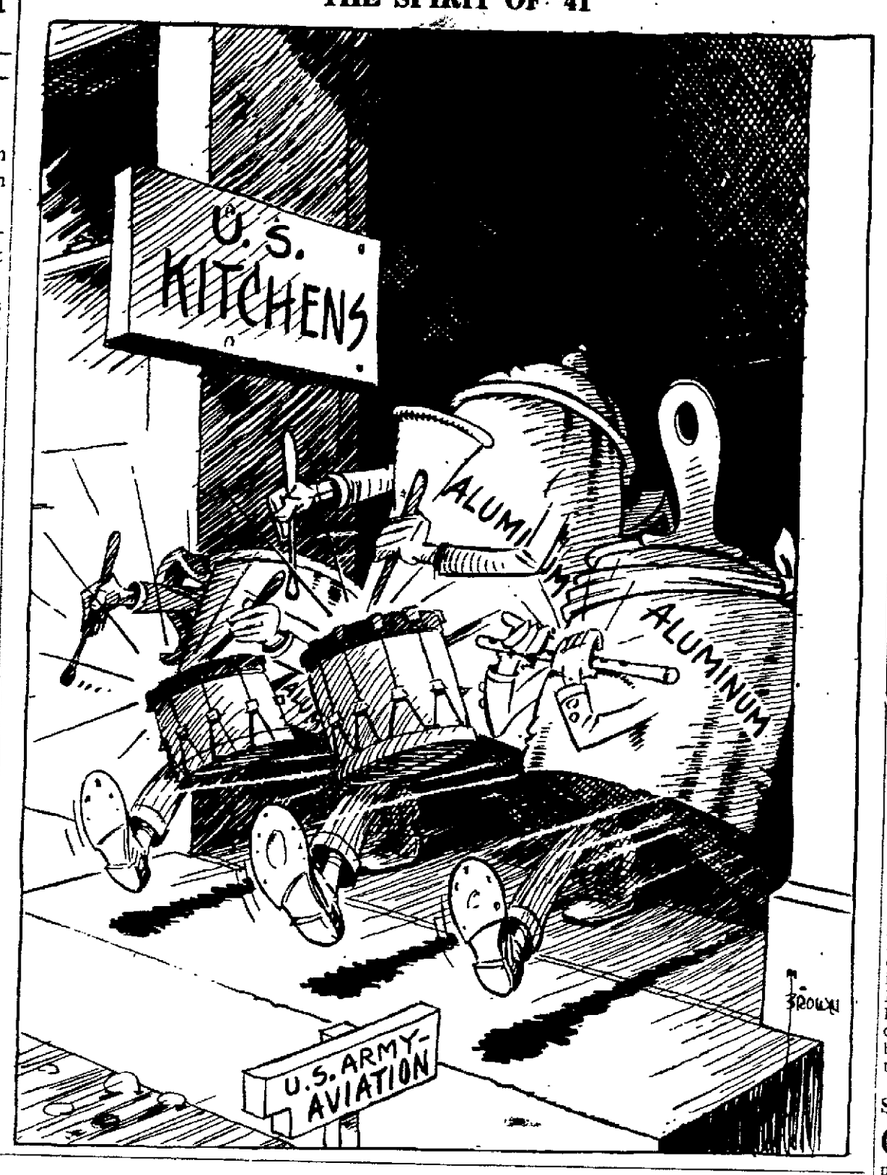
Hoarding May Hasten Inflation

PEOPLE who are worried about the prospects of inflation and rush out to load up on consumers' goods before the prices go sky-high are doing their bit to bring on inflation.

"The real essence of inflation," explains a teacher of economics, "is inventory accumulation which involves production in excess of immediate needs. Whether the excess stock be held by the producer, by the distributor or by the consumer, makes little difference. In the course of an ordinary inflation all are likely to have stocks beyond their probable early requirements."

If this country were clearly at war it would be recognized as both wise and patriotic to go without a few things instead of hoarding more than were needed. The kind of defense the nation has undertaken and must push forward vigorously calls for similar self-denial.

THE SPIRIT OF '41



Wheeler's Ideas About Russia

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON — Writing for the Democratic national committee Charles Michelson resents the attacks of Herbert Hoover and Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana on U. S. aid to Russia. It is nothing new for Michelson to attack Hoover. It was the campaign conducted by Michelson, under the auspices of John J. Raskob and Jouett Shouse, which is generally accredited with doing more than any other two or three things to make Hoover so easy to beat in 1932.

It is only since the supreme court packing fight that the Michelson pen has been turned against Wheeler. More in sorrow than in anger, doubtless, Michelson recalls Wheeler's attitude toward Russia BEFORE the Hitler invasion of the Soviet.

In 1930, Michelson recalls, Wheeler, after a long tour of Russia, wrote a series of articles which were later reprinted in the Congressional Record. He quotes this "conclusion" by the Montana senator at that time:

"Russia for 13 years has maintained a stable government—much more stable than have most of the South American and Latin countries. They have maintained order within their borders . . . They have met promptly the obligations incurred by them since they came into power.

"By all the rules of international law and practice they are entitled to recognition."

MICHELSON thought that was fine, then. Apparently he still does though he does not say much about that any more. He now takes the more practical ground.

"Perhaps in view of the potentialities of the Russo-German war," he writes, "the importance of material aid to the Soviet outfit will be appreciated. It amounts to a great deal more than our distaste for Bolshevism, or Bolshevik habits, customs or excesses—which have no more to do with what the defense of America demands, than Joe Stalin's pipe or complexion."

Actually, President Roosevelt has been accused often of leaning too much to the ideals of the Soviet Republic. And it has not been so many years since Wheeler was accused of being a Communist at heart, if not in fact.

But there is no doubt in the minds of some of the severest criticis of this alleged excessive sympathy with the Communists on the part of the administration that we should not slap down anyone who is fighting on what is actually OUR side of the war.

WHEELER and Hoover take the position that it is not OUR side because we are not formally IN the war. But if taxing our people to GIVE guns and planes and munitions and ships and food to Britain, and to every other nation that has given any indication of fighting Hitler, is not being in the war actually it certainly puts this country in what will be an unfortunate position if Britain should go down.

No reasonable person would expect Hitler to take it all in good part. We have done so much to hurt and anger Hitler that, whatever may have been the wisdom or lack of it governing our performances, up to now, it has become rather vital to the future of the United States that Hitler should not be permitted to win.

"Hitler's enemies," an administration leader remarked, "are our friends—for the time being."

Don't Lose Your Salt

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

PEG'S "regusted." Three years ago, when she left college, she vowed she "wouldn't get into a rut, the way most people did." No meaningless marriage for her, no routine chore. She was going to select something—the one, right outlet—that would change the drab drag of the years into a dramatic adventure.

But what? How could an intelligent, energetic person keep life at flood tide?

She's tried everything. Music . . . dancing . . . social service . . . the Little Theater group. A course in journalism. Lately, war work. Bundles for Britain. Aviation. Fascinating programs, every one of them. Or so they seemed for the first few days or weeks. But, invariably, each one let her down sooner or later. The old feeling of emptiness crept back, swept over her in a gray and greasy tide. Then what? Surely there must be, somewhere, a solution . . . the one "adjustment" that would help her "find herself."

"It must be so wonderful," she muses, "to have a career like yours . . . so thrilling . . . something that keeps you constantly stimulated. . . ."

Says she and five million other youngsters, each of whom thinks his reaction is unique! 'Tisn't. Practically every one of our Younger Generation . . . and a considerable proportion of our Oldsters . . . are looking, as Peg is, for something that will shoot life full of dynamite. Some are Lovelies behind the notion counter . . . Clark Gables in the Shipping Department. Others are pampered "geniuses," "misunderstood" husbands and wives. But, like Peg, they all believe that there's some special formula somewhere which will guarantee Perpetual Palpitation and banish boredom forever.

They're not dumb, these Yearners. They've simply been so conditioned that they believe life must be full of fireworks, or it's a flop. And they waste feverish years waiting for a Red Hot Setup which never comes. Watching their restless experiments, I think back to those words uttered 2000 years ago.

It was dull, too, there around Jerusalem, in Galilee, Bethsaida, Capernaum and the towns of Cesarea Philippi. There, as today, young people and old wandered disconsolately in the markets, seeking escape from obscurity, envying those in public places. Failing other adventure, they crowded about the young prophet from Nazareth, followed Him in eager crowds, demanding miracles, clutching, at any sensation He might offer. Until, looking deep into their avid eyes, pitying their futile clutching, He said:

"SALT IS GOOD: BUT IF THE SALT HAVE LOST HIS SALTINESS. WHEREWITH WILL YE SEASON IT? HAVE SALT IN YOURSELVES—"

SALT IS good — and necessary. Life needs savour, color, fire. But no contact, no job, can give you that savour ready made. The secret of a colorful life lies within YOURSELF, in the ability of your eyes to detect drama and feel wonder where another sees only hated monotony. A columnist's job is no more exciting than a sheep-herder's, save as he, himself, discovers and develops excitement. He has no magic secret, no special opportunities. He gets out of life what he puts into it. That goes for us all.

"HAVE SALT IN YOURSELVES." If you want more savour in life, don't look for it on a grocery shelf or in an employment agency. Give it out of your eager interest, your own broadened sympathy, curiosity, imagination and understanding. For you get what you give—no more, no less.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

New Deal Senators Berate FDR's Vacillating Policy Against Axis

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Criticism of Roosevelt by isolationists is an old story on Capitol Hill; but the president was never more sharply criticized than by his staunchest senatorial supporters at a recent hair-down get-together over foreign affairs.

Speaking as first-hand sufferers, they unburdened themselves about "White House leadership" in bitter words.

The pow-wow took place in a private dining room off the senate restaurant. Among those present was Vice President Wallace, who, however, left early. The discussion centered on two grievances, which have galled cabinet and administration leaders ever since the defense emergency arose.

One is Roosevelt's constant backing and filling on taking firm measures against the Axis; the other his frequent habit of letting down those who carry the ball for him in congress.

Leading the attack were aggressive, young New Deal Senators Josh Lee of Oklahoma and Claude Pepper of Florida. Both sharply censured Roosevelt for his "ultra-caution" in waiting for public opinion to fall on foreign policy, instead of "leading public opinion," which, they declared, he should do as president.

An outstanding example of this, they said, was his vacillating stand on convoys. Lee and Pepper contended that the president realizes more clearly than anyone else that convoys are necessary if supplies are to be delivered to Britain. Yet, despite this, he has held back from openly espousing convoys for fear of Wheeler-Lindbergh outcries that he is trying to get the country into war.

Slapped Down.

ON the other hand, every time one of the president's supporters speaks out for convoys or some other vigorous policy, Senator Lee complained, he is promptly slapped down by a White House spokesman.

"I am sincerely trying to help the president," said the senator from Oklahoma, "but frankly, I am getting disheartened by his failure to back up those of us who stick our necks out for him. I delivered a speech on foreign policy not long ago which the president saw and approved beforehand. The next day I was called to task by the White House."

Wallace Departs.

OTHERS echoing similar complaints were Democratic Senators Alben Barkley, Francis Maloney of Connecticut, and Abe Murdock of Utah; also Republicans Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, Chan Gurney of South Dakota and Joseph H. Ball of Minnesota. Barkley particularly appeared to enjoy the panning session, but not Vice President Wallace.

He said little, except to agree that the White House had been guilty of some inconsistency. When the group really began to get rough with the president, Wallace nervously excused himself and departed. The only one present who spoke a word in defense of the president was Pepper, who speculated that the "pressure of work" might have something to do with the failure to back up supporters of the foreign policy.

Republicans Bridges, Gurney and Ball got a big hand from Democratic colleagues when they protested that despite his talk about "national unity," the president's GOP supporters were seldom invited to White House conferences on foreign policy.

Franked Propaganda.

THE Steuben Society of America, 369 Lexington avenue, is sending out large quantities of propaganda in the franked (free mail) envelopes of Senator Gerald P. Nye, vociferous North Dakota foe of Roosevelt's anti-Axis policy.

The propaganda consists of a speech by Theodore H. Hoffman, national chairman of the society, which Nye inserted in the Congressional Record (at public expense) as an "extension of his remarks." The only way the franked envelopes could be obtained is from Nye himself.

The society also is offering franked envelopes of Nye and Senator Burt Wheeler, containing attacks on the Aid-Britain program, to its members for distribution.

Announcement of this interesting U. S.-financed propaganda campaign is contained in a bulletin issued by Unit No. 55 of the society calling a meeting to be addressed by Hoffman. This was the message:

"At this meeting copies of addresses by Senators Nye and Wheeler will be distributed to members so that they may send them to their friends. Come and get your share of leaflets for distribution. These excerpts can be used to publicize our society to great advantage. They can be sent to those of our race and others to demonstrate in the first instance that our society is doing something, and in the second instance, that those of our race have been an important part in the building up of our country.

"These excerpts are in franked envelopes and require no postage. We must keep up the fight to stay out of war, and this is one of the ways in which we can help."

Note—Henry Hoke, editor of the Reporter of Direct Mail Advertising, also has charged that Wheeler's frank was used by certain organizations to distribute literature. Wheeler hotly denied this, but when further challenged on the matter of Ulric Bell, executive secretary of the Fight for Freedom committee, made no reply.

Silent Treatment.

NORMAN THOMAS found the senate military affairs committee a poor sounding board for his isolationist views when he testified against extending the one-year service of selectees. What he doesn't know is that New Deal Senators Josh Lee of Oklahoma and Lister Hill of Alabama planned it that way.

The limelight-loving Socialist leader was panting for a clash with supporters of the president's defense policies. After reading a prepared statement, he leaned back and challengingly demanded: "Any questions, gentlemen?"

Lee and Hill looked him over. "How do you think we ought to handle him?" whispered Lee. "He's just aching to have someone question him so he can sound off."

"Let's give him the silent treatment," advised Hill. "That's the one thing that will stop him." Lee nodded enthusiastically, and the word was flashed down the line, from senator to senator. Each in turn grinningly replied, "No questions."

"Thank you very much, Mr. Thomas. We enjoyed hearing your views," said Chairman Reynolds finally, as the Socialist leader, his face the color of a stop-light, gathered up his papers and sheepishly left the stand.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—These are red barn days and this means that the summer theater, which thrives in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, and New England, is well into its season.

So let's go over to Newark, get on Route 29, and keep following it until we come to New Hope. That's Bucks county Pennsylvania, and there you will find one of the three most celebrated summer theaters in the country, the Bucks County Play House, which George S. Kaufman, Moss Hart, James Thurber, Kenyon Nicholson and others of the "celebrity belt" have made into a national institution.

KENYON NICHOLSON, ex-Columbia university professor, is a farmer now, and the theater's manager . . . He is the playwright who wrote "Sailor Beware" and "The Barker." . . . But by 6 a. m. on summer days you can spy him driving a tractor, or delivering gift baskets of vegetables to his friends.

The playhouse itself used to be an old mill. It is still an old mill, and the water has to be turned off during performances because the old mill wheel makes so much noise. Actually, it is one of the most beautiful little theaters in the country and one of the few that is air-conditioned.

Their most exciting week this season comes July 18, when Playwrights Kaufman and Hart will do their best to live up to "The Man Who Came to Dinner." Harpo Marx will also appear as "Banjo," a character built around his eccentric behavior, and it will be the first time he ever has spoken words on any stage.

THE week after "Man Who Came to Dinner" the attraction will be "The Primrose Path," and Edith King will be the star. I ran into Edith on Broadway one morning about three weeks ago, and she told me then she was off to Bucks county for the summer. She was just in off the road with Frederic March and his wife in a play that will open in New York in the fall, probably October.

New Hope, where the playhouse has become the center of summer activity, is a town of about 500 people. But its patronage comes from Philly and Trenton and from the entire countryside. Vacant seats no longer are a problem, even in wet weather. Nicholson, Kaufman, Hart and the others all have farms nearby. They have brought a measure of Broadway and a fair amount of fame to the locality, and the county is grateful. It wouldn't surprise me in the least to read some morning that George S. Kaufman had been elected sheriff.

For its first anniversary, Spivy's Roof drafted such celebrities of the stage as Burgess Meredith, Dorothy McGuire, Gilda Gray, and Ethel Merman.

The United States army took over the mail services of the American Expeditionary Forces in France on July 25, 1918, in order to expedite service to the forces overseas.

A Farmer's Diary

Uncle Dan

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

WHENEVER I passed by, on my way to school, I saw the old man working in his garden. The path that led that way from his house was almost lost in witch hazel, tall purple ironweed, and tender water touch-me-nots. I used to pause before I reached his gate and watch him work—and I used to like it when he did not even see me or know that I was there.

He was quite old, with thin gray hair that blew about his hatless head. His perspiring brow was wrinkled but the expression of his face was serene and kind and strong. He seemed to work easily, hardly knowing that he did it, while he thought of something else. I used to wonder what he thought about that made him look like that.

His clothes were worn and poorly patched in places. His suspenders were two muslin strips, slit at each end and buttoned over broad white buttons sewn to the belt of his pants. He lived alone . . . you could sense that from his looks . . . yet there was a completeness about the very atmosphere of him that, even then, I found admirable—but elusive.

Now, looking back at that stooped old man who impressed me so, I realize that what I felt was the essence of noble thoughts. Time, and a world of noble living, may bring God down to the humble scenes of earth. Here was human frailty and great spiritual force. The last of life, to this man, was the best—and even those who passed his garden gate might linger, wistfully, and watch him hoe, while the arching shrubs and the great tall oak beyond whispered in the breeze and added richness to the silent conversation.

He saw me and straightened his stiffened body which made him seem much taller. Then he hung his hoe on a seedling peach tree and come over to where I was. He took my small young hand in his and seemed glad to see me. His fingers were firm and steadying as he inquired about my mother and all the folks.

I hoped, diffidently, that I was not bothering him.

He smiled, and his steel-gray eyes touched mine. "That garden," he said, "is like life itself, I think. No matter how hard you work at it, it's never finished. The peas and hollyhocks bloom like this every year . . . most things are that way, they come like habits. If a fellow sets 'em out right in the first place, he can enjoy 'em all his life.

"The grass grows and we just expect it to—but whenever a man gets down on the grass and looks up, he can see beyond the stars. That's nice—now isn't it?" He smiled—and I laughed, too, and thought how queer he was, but I have always remembered it.

CRAWFORD GIRL TO COMPETE IN HEALTH MEET

Miss Mabel Hill Selected as County's Healthiest Girl Recently.

BUCYRUS—Crawford county's healthiest girl was making preparations today to go to the state fair next month to compete with youths from other counties for the right to go on to Chicago to compete in the national healthiest girl contest.

She is Miss Mabel Hill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Hill of near Bucyrus. She was picked by Dr. G. T. Wasson, county health commissioner, after a series of elimination contests.

Miss Hill represented Whetstone, where she is a member of the Busy Bee 4-H club. Alternate chosen was Miss Alice Crum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Byron Crum of Tiro.

BUCYRUS — "I never would have known you."

This was the comment of Mrs. Charles George of Huntington Park, Calif., when she met her sister, Mrs. Martin Luksik of near Bucyrus for the first time in 42 years.

The sisters were reunited this week after having not seen each other since they were children in Austria-Hungary.

Mrs. George left Austria in 1899 for New York and later moved to Massachusetts, where she was married. The couple later moved to Texas and still later to Utah, finally to California, each move taking them farther from the sister in Ohio.

It was years before Mrs. George had learned that her younger sister, Mrs. Luksik, had left Austria-Hungary.

Coming to Ohio for the reunion with Mrs. George were her two younger children, James, 13, and Geraldine, 9.

Next week, in company with their half-sister, Mrs. John Hornak of west of Bucyrus, the sisters who had so long been separated will go to New Hampshire where they will hold another reunion with their brother whom neither has seen for many years.

PLAN $225,000 BOND VOTE FOR CITY AIRPORT

C. of C. Group To Recommend Popular Vote at Election Next November.

port on the status of the present airport and the plans for the future.

In support of the bond issue, discussions at the meeting developed these points.

1—That United Airlines already has filed an application with federal authorities to make Mansfield airport a stop point. The plan, however, is conditioned on the provision that Mansfield has a suitable airport.

2—That industry has and will continue to consider Mansfield for new factories and plants providing there are suitable airport facilities.

3—That the current defense program will act as a springboard for aviation here. Thousands of pilots now in defense training and the high-gear operation of aircraft plants will continue aviation progress at a quickened pace after the present emergency is over. That, unless Mansfield equipped with airport facilities, the city will not keep step with others of the same size who now have and are building satisfactory ports.

4—That Mansfielders should not look upon the airport as a project for private enterprise but should view it as a project creating another national highway for the city. The building of three concrete runways estimated to cost $225,000 planned for the airport, will be no higher in cost than the price of paving some three miles of highway. Highway improvements are carried out near Mansfield every year without any expressions of alarm because of the cost.

5—That Joplin, Mo., 32,500 population, has an airport with four runways; Moline, Ill., population 33,450, has a four-runway airport; Sweetwater, Tex., population 19,848, has an airport with four runways; and that scores of airports are now under construction in cities similar to Mansfield in size.

6—That as far as Mansfield is concerned the city has only spent $28,000 on the present project. A sum of $8,000 was the cost of the land purchase, $10,000 was expended for grading, and $10,000 for installing 38 miles of drain tile. A total of $38,000 was spent by CWA, WPA and FERA during the pick and shovel period of depression days.

7—That Mansfield has all of the underground work completed and now only needs the hard surface sunways to place the airport in the Class 3 rating. Such airports as Cleveland and Columbus are in the best or Class 4 rating.

These points were emphasized before the group by Rev. D. N. Roller who read the JAC's report to the group. The report is to be published in pamphlet form and is being distributed by the JAC.

Edwin Balyeat, chairman of the JAC aviation committee, said that the proposed bond issue would amount to approximately $4.50 per year for five years on property valuations of $5,000.

A number of civic organizations have already endorsed the program, and John G. Routzon, secretary-manager of the Chamber of Commerce, said the senior group's aviation committee and the directors have already approved it.

"It is time for Mansfield to seriously consider proper airport facilities to keep step with progress," Routzon said.

Others speaking and introduced at the meeting included, J. R. Harrington, airport manager; Don Kirkpatrick, JAC president; and Arthur Lindley, JAC aviation committee secretary. Others in the audience joined in the discussion after the JAC report was read.

Chairman Bonar who presided during the session said that plans would go forward for the creation of a city-wide organization to support the issue.

RICHLAND FARM BUREAU HEADS FOR PEAK YEAR

Dollar Volume Expected To Reach $800,000; Membership Hits 1,000.

With an average yearly turn over of more than half a million dollars, the Richland county Farm Bureau Cooperative association today appeared to be headed for a peak year with a total dollar volume reaching nearly $800,000.

Greatest yearly dollar volume total on the Bureau's records is that of 1937 with a figure of $780,000 but records to date show that with slightly more than half of the year gone the dollar volume total now reaches $405,000.

The Cooperative is owned and operated by Richland county farmers who hold stock in the association. Approximately 1,000 members now belong to the Bureau, which operates under cooperative laws of Ohio which state that 51 per cent of the yearly busines must be done with members of the cooperative group, W. B. Davis, manager of the organization said.

Net savings over operating costs are pro-rated to members and patrons alike at the end of he year, Davis stated.

In addition to the 1,000 members of the organization in the county the Bureau serves approximately 4,000 customers in a year, Davis said.

The Bureau handles a complete line of farm supplies, dairy, hog and poultry feeds, fence, roofing, paints, farm machinery and petroleum products, to name a few.

Largest items in last year's $600,000 total dollar volume was petroleum products $100,000, feed $154,000, grain, $52,000 and machinery and parts, $25,000, Davis said.

The Bureau also operates a delivery service for petroleum products employing four trucks for the job. In addition to this service the Bureau carries on a marketing service of live stock and poultry, and does custom grinding and mixing of feeds to formula for farmers.

The marketing service transports livestock and poultry to the large city markets near Mansfield. Formula grinding of feeds is grinding and mixing the desired proportions of grains according to certain specifications named by the farmer, Davis said.

CITY ASSURED OF CHLORINE SUPPLY FOR SWIMMING POOLS

Although swimming pools in the neighboring communities are being threatened with the possibility of closing because of a shortage in chlorine due to defense demands, Mansfield bathers were assured today of swimming for the year.

Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton announced today that the city had on hand sufficient chlorine for treatment of its drinking water and also for pool water at Liberty park pool.

State Health Director R. H. Markwith revealed today that operators of swimming pools in the state are experiencing difficulty in obtaining chlorine needed to keep their water pure.

Mount Vernon, Delphos and Upper Arlington pool managers have already reported depleted supplies, according to Markwith. The health director said that only one-half of one per cent of the national output of chlorine gas would be needed to supply the nation's pools for the rest of the season. Markwith has written to Washington asking that swimming pools receive priority consideration as a health measure.

Crafton said that although the city advertised for chlorine this spring that it was not necessary to contract for a new supply because a carload had been received late in the fall of 1940 and would serve the city for the remainder of the year.

Mail Provides Daily Headaches For Gov. James

HARRISBURG, Pa.—(INS)—Gifts ranging from sure-fire cures for a variety of ailments to cancelled stamps are part of the flood of mail received daily by Gov. Arthur H. James of Pennsylvania.

In return, the governor is asked for jobs, $250 hand embroidered flags or his old hats.

The governor once received from an eccentric admirer a black-and-white cloth "taken from a body in a cemetery at midnight" that was guaranteed to keep lady luck smiling.

Another person requested Governor James to forward a live grouse—the official state bird.

Biggest problem for the governor are the bills received for "gifts" sent to the executive offices.

At one time, people would leave the gifts in the reception room and send the governor a bill after he had acknowledged the present.

The Tennessee Valley Authority employs some 20,000 men and women.

Color Harmony Considered In Our Make-up

By MAX FACTOR, Jr., Famous Hollywood Make-Up Specialist Writing For (INS)

HOLLYWOOD — Today, nearly every woman is a conscious observer of the theory of color harmony in the application of her make-up

These observant women know that the surest road to glamorous perfection in their made-up appearance comes from following this very practical theory, which sensibly demands that the shade of each make-up material used must complement the natural hair and complexion colorings of the individual upon whom it appears, and that it also must artistically harmonize with the color tints of the other make-up aids applied.

A considerably lesser number of women, however, are appreciators of the fact that an altogether comparable "harmony" principle should be observed in the selection and use of perfume.

Such scent harmony is even more important to the glamour auro of feminine grooming today than it was only a very few years ago, for the whole scheme of accentuating feminine beauty has undergone many important changes in a comparatively brief elapse of time.

We cannot overlook the point, for instance, that the make-up accentuated appearance of the smartest women of today is one which stresses naturalness and simplicity to a much greater degreen than it did in 1938 or 1939.

A great many of those women however, are entirely overlooking this same glamour theme in the selection of their perfume. Very frequently you see women whose make-up dramatization of their appearance is quite up to the minute in its smartness and simplicity, but whose perfume is still the heavy and highly sophisticated one which they first selected and favored some years ago.

This is a glamor faux pas, just as much so as wearing an ermine evening coat with slacks or a riding costume would be. The girl who presents a distinctly naive and unsophisticated appearance in her grooming can't plausibly or convincingly accentuate this effect with a sensuous perfume which automatically conjures up visions of a harem and its sirens.

Styles Are Definitely American Say Designers

By JANE COCHRAN

NEW YORK—(INS)—Clothes for the present day American scene are being drawn from the inspiration of our American heritage. Designs essentially American are appearing for wear from morning until night—playsuits printed in barnyard rooster patterns and evening dresses of cotton printed with a pattern taken from an historic wrought iron gate.

For the first time, the fashion designer's native land is proving a rich source of inspiration. Summer in New England inspires cool and attractive fashions for hot days.

There's a print of hydrangea along a picket fence—a new twist to the horizontal strips theme. The print is a faithful reproduction of this familiar scene and an attractive one for all types of clothes.

Cool and refreshing as a lily studded pond is the evening dress print inspired by just such a pond—big white lilies line-drawn on a dark background.

The weathervanes of Cape Cod, brass door knockers and picturesque lanterns make amusing prints and the country auction is represented in a print showing vanes, lanterns and door knockers as well as the other articles that are sold to the highest bidder in that fine American institution.

Pottery Inspirations

Old pottery furnishes flower inspirations — morning glories from an old luster bowl are used in a print that makes both evening gowns and play ensembles.

A quaint, off-the-shoulder evening dress features a print as dainty and nostalgic as the dress style itself — tiny climbing roses with bright green leaves.

The Pennsylvania Dutch have also been a fertile field of design inspiration. The demure Amish kerchief has been used with striking results in a dress with a shin-length skirt.

The barnyard rooster is cleverly used on playsuits topped with crisp, unassuming white pique collars.

Homely objects have been turned into flippant and frivolous lapel gadgets, twice as amusing because they're so unexpected—a cuckoo clock for example. Pull a little cord, the door pops and the cuckoo sticks out its silly head.

Designers have only begun to use Americana in their clothes and fabric styles but the trend is one that is expected to grow rapidly.

A Treatise On Guiding Three Sons

By GARRY MYERS, Ph.D.

The mother of three boys 14, 5, 4, and the author of some published children's stories writes:

"I am, at your suggestion, taking notes on my 'Three Bears'."

Let me quote a bit from the excellent plan which she sent me:

"When Jimmy was 3 years and 7 months old, he came to me one day in a game of make-believe. He was dressed in an odd assortment of old clothes that made him feel dressed as his Daddy dresses for hunting. He had a play shotgun in one hand and held up one little empty hand, saying:

Only Make-Believe.

"'See, Mudder, see what I got!'

"I answered, 'My, my, such a big one, what do you call it?'

"'It's a groundhog, Mudder—two groundhogs. Isn't 'em nice ones?'

"'Well I should say they are, Jimmy. Come here and get a kiss for coming home so early from your hunting.'

"He objected, 'Oh no, Mudder, you must say, "Jim".' (Jim is our Daddy's boss at the shop and often goes hunting with my husband.)

"I corrected myself, 'Oh, I am sorry. Come here, Jim, and get a big kiss.'

"Dr. Myers, I'll never forget the horrified expression on my baby's face so long as I live. He said, 'Oh Mudder, why, you don't kiss Jim! You kiss my Daddy! Toots (Jim's wife) kiss Jim; you kiss my daddy.'" . . .

Next this mother told me of the excellent plan by which the older boys have earned their own spending money. And here's what she says about the way those boys use their own money:

Savings Plan.

"Both our boys buy many of their own clothes with their money. We say nothing about what they buy, unless it be totally unsuitable, too dear, or just plain silly. Brooks has been buying a number of nice toys. Recently he saved $1.50 towards a bow and arrow set. It was every cent he made in those three weeks. Daddy had told him he would pay the last dollar, also the sales tax, if Brooks could save the $1.50. Now Brooks is saving for a game that costs almost $3.00 and his father told him he would furnish the final dollar and the sale stax. The two older boys also have been talking about buying a card table with a checkerboard on it. They plan to buy that together. I think it is a good plan to have them own a few things together. Later on, they will be co-owners of things with their wives and it is up to us to teach them the amount of co-operation it takes. R. E. has an insurance policy which costs him 25 cents per week, his permanent saving, since it is an endowment policy. Brooks is going to take out a little 10 cent policy, to be converted later into a 25 cent one, when he can make more money."

It's parents like the parents of these three boys who build a great and grand America.

A selected list of books on understanding the child and living more happily in the family may be had without cost by writing me, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

Solving Parent Problems.

Q. What principle of punishment do you consider hardest for the average father to understand?

A. The principle that punishment tends only to inhibit, that pain, therefore, should be used, as a rule, only to keep the child from doing the few things he should never do but not to get him to do the many things good for him to do. Make pleasant what you want the child to do, painful only what you want him never to do. Many a dad, otherwise intelligent, will spank the tot to make him stop hurting the dog or playing in the fire (which may be good procedure) and also spank him to make him close the door (bad procedure).

By MARIAN MARTIN

If you dress on a budget plan, here's a frock you really need! For the shirtwaist style of Pattern 9765 is trim, wearable and will be as smart next season as it is right now. Moreover, it's a Marian Martin design, which means that it's easy as can be to make. The convenient front buttoning gives slender, vertical lines, aided by the panelling down the front skirt. Yoking keeps your shoulders smooth and trim and there's darting below to hold-in the bodice softness You'll like the nice shaping of the notched collar which may be self-fabric or contrast. That inset hand gives your waist a slim, young look. Choose short or long sleeves for this spirited dress!

Pattern 9765 may be ordered only in women's sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 3⅞ yards 39 inch fabric.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

Mary stared at me as I put the question.

"You're going to call Steve?" she queried tremulously.

"Why not?" I countered. "After all, what we are afraid of is that Noel, while still in his present murderous mood, will find Steve."

"Yes, I suppose it's the only thing to do," she said. "What are you going to say to him?"

Wants Redfield's Number.

"I want his number first," I said, with what patience I could muster.

"Oh, I'm sorry," she said, and gave me the number. By the time I had given it to the operator, Mary patently had obeyed my injunction to pull herself together, and spoke crisply.

"If Noel isn't there already," she said, "and that question will probably send Stevie into a tailspin, you'd better tell him delicately that Noel is missing, and advise him to tell the desk downstairs that he's gone to a hospital with rabies, leprosy, housemaid's knee or what have you. Then tell him to put out his lights and lie low tell we send him word Noel has been safely corralled."

Redfield, Too, Is Out.

She was hiding her fear under a mask of ribaldry, I could see plainly, and I played up to her.

"I'll tell him faithfully everything you've said," I told her as I turned back to the telephone.

But when I turned to her again, I could not hide the gravity of my tidings.

"Stephen Redfield is not in his apartment," I said. "He definitely has not come in within the hour, as the same man has been on at the desk, and would have seen him if he had come in."

"Oh, oh!" she said again, and then sinking into the nearest chair, she put her face in her hands for a tense second.

"Here's a thought," she said, "the only encouraging one in this mess."

"Steve was in a funk when he left," she said. "He tried to disguise it, but he was scared stiff. And he has quite a bit of native cunning, the kind a weasel has when it thinks it's cornered."

"Your opinion of Mr. Redfield—" I began slyly." Even in the stress of the moment, I could not help that gibe.

"Wouldn't bear repeating," she said impatiently. "But let me get on. What I'm trying to get over is that, perhaps he didn't go back to his apartment tonight, but has gone somewhere else, someplace where Noel can't find him until he gets over his brainstorm."

"That's a reassuring thought," I told her, "and I hope your surmise is right. At any rate, we have done all we can. We can only sit here until we have news. Or have you something in mind we could do?"

Surprise About Olina.

"Not a thing," she answered, and while we're waiting, I might as well get something off my mind.

"It's isn't about the wigging you're going to give me," she went on hastily. "That's coming, I know, but it can wait until this excitement's over. But this is something Olina spilled to me when I went back tonight, and it's queer.

"You know, Olina really's getting to be an awfully good egg," she began surprisingly. "You know what an unmitigated five letter word beginning with 'L' she was in the days before that always-to-be-remembered rehearsal?"

"I know—and I remember," I said unsmilingly, for while I hold no rancor against Olina, she is not an especial favorite of mine.

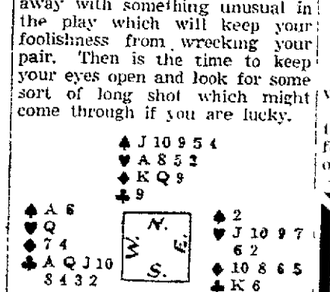
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

BY Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

YOU MUST MAKE GOOD

Have you ever bid your side into a spot so absurd that you fear you are about to lose your partner? Your only chance to preserve the entente cordiale, or rather, to restore it, may be to get away with something unusual in the play which will keep your foolishness from wrecking your pair. Then is the time to keep your eyes open and look for some sort of long shot which might come through if you are lucky.



(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 NT	3 ♠	4 ♥
4 ♠	4 NT	5 ♣	Pass
Pass	Dbl	Rdbl

You guessed it. West was trying to impede the bidding of his vulnerable opponents, and made his two wild No Trump bids with the idea that he would run out to clubs if he was doubled. When the opponents got as high as they did, he felt that his bidding had lured them into thinking he was weaker than he was So he doubled, counting on his partner's 4-Heart bid as showing some kind of defensive strength.

After South's redouble, he realized the case was desperate. So he decided to try to get a ruff of a heart. South took his heart Q lead with the dummy's A and sent the spade J to his A. From what West could see, he calculated that South had to hold the diamond A in order to have opened the bidding. Hence the only possible chance to locate an entry in his partner's hand was it East had the club K.

Consequently West led back his club 2. Sure enough, East had the K and immediately returned a heart. The resultant ruff with the spade 6 beat the contract and gave the unorthodox West, the noted Manny Mason, a reward instead of punishment for his series of bridge crimes.

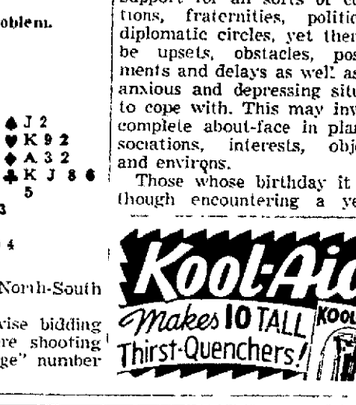
Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: North. North-South vulnerable.)

How would you advise bidding this hand, if you were shooting for an "impossibly large" number of points on it?

HOROSCOPE

For Saturday, July 26.

While this day's aspects promise much opportunity for advancement, preferment, public recognition and cooperation, with fair support for all sorts of cooperations, fraternities, political or diplomatic circles, yet there may be upsets, obstacles, postponements and delays as well as other anxious and depressing situations to cope with. This may involve a complete about-face in plans, associations, interests, objectives and environs.

Those whose birthday it is, although encountering a year of promise for promotion, expansion, and public or group honors or support, yet may find impediment, limitations, delays and disappointments to challenge the abilities as well as patience and fortitude. Large organizations and influential friends may be counted upon to come to the rescue if diplomatically and sagaciously convinced of the worth of propositions.

A child born on this day although having enterprise and efficiency may need the support of elders, friends and those in high places.

GOP Plans Criticism of Giant Tax Bill

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

The Legends of Broadway.

(No. 13—The Music Maker)

THE Young Man With a Horn died 10 years ago, but he is the all time legend for those who danced and those who listened to sweet, brassy music in an age known as the Jazz Era. Leon Bismark Beiderbecke, he was, known as Bix, and through the brief beautiful-sounding span of his 28 years he held his cornet high, and the notes he caressed out of that golden horn were magic.

Dorothy Kilgallen

He was forever doing things he shouldn't do. He got out of a sick bed on a miserable night to play a club date in Princeton, and contracted pneumonia. His lips never touched a horn again.

Even while he lived, there was something strange and wonderful and apart about him; in a back room, in a noisy cellar, in a jammed dance hall, there was an aura of immortality about Bix and his horn that those who looked could see.

Bix preferred the cornet to the larger and easier trumpet. Bix never was a faker. The gravel roll and the wah-wah of the hot trumpeter were not for him; the true note was his delight. He was with Hoagy Carmichael one night, listening to Bessie Smith records, and suddenly he grabbed his horn and said "Come on."

They drove down to Chicago's Black Belt and parked. Bix stood up in the open-topped jaloppy and raised his face to the sky and played "St. Louis Woman" to the stars.

"That's for the human cornet," he said, "That's for Bessie."

There was the night Louis Armstrong was river-boating up from New Orleans for his first Chicago date. A fisherman was looking for his rowboat that night, but he couldn't find it. Young Bix had borrowed it to row out to where the boat was anchored in the Mississippi.

He talked to the great Louis and the Negro let him join the jam session.

Louis listened to Bix play. Then he wiped his forehead with his huge handkerchief and said, "Son, if you wa' mah color I wouldn't play within a hundred yards of you. You is the King!"

When Larry Clinton was asked where he got his idea of swinging the classics and turning them into popular songs, he said: "Just listen to some of the Bix records. He mouths Debussy the way Busse corns Hot Lips. Just listen—and you won't ask questions."

Bix heard of Louis Armstrong's success in Europe and he got the urge to tour the continent with a star white band. Gene Krupa, Joe Venuti, Joe Sullivan and Jimmy Dorsey were to be the nucleus of the outfit—but they didn't have $200 between them.

Bix asked Owney Madden for backing—Owney, who had pieces of everything from night clubs to breweries. Owney said sure—but he wanted 50 per cent of the band.

So Bix walked out. "We're artists, sir," he said, "not prize fighters!"

Only the other night there was a free-for-all at the musicians' hangout, Charlie's Tavern on Seventh avenue. A few of the cooler lads broke it up.

A horn man from one of the top bands pressed a cold cloth against his eye. "That bum over there," he explained, "had the nerve to say Bix was a gin blower and only had the wind for two choruses!"

So a full decade has passed since Bix last blew his horn, but the boys still remember him well enough to fight about him. He was remembered and loved, and when you are remembered and loved, you are a legend of Broadway.

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD — All the gentlemen up in Canada whose business it is to inspect passports had better prepare for a shock; they're going to be handed a few of the documents accompanied by photos that look like the bearers. The photos, moreover, will be "glamorous" — a startling innovation in the passport business.

Behind all this is an unusual movie expedition, first of its kind. "Captains of the Clouds" will be the first Hollywood movie shot entirely on location in Canada. A number of films, notably "The Country Doctor" and others featuring the Dionne quintuplets, have crossed the border for portions of their footage. "Captains" plans to go all the way—and in color besides. James Cagney, George Brent, Dennis Morgan and possibly a girl lead to be named later, will make the trip, with Michael Curtiz directing.

Nobody goes who isn't an American citizen and a registered voter—this is a movie to be made under war-time conditions, in one of the very centers of Canada's war effort: Royal Canadian Air Force headquarters at Uplands Field, Ottawa.

The Warners are making the movie primarily because they think they'll get a hit out of it (that being the prime notion behind every movie) but at the same time it represents the first extension of the "good neighbor" hand northward from Hollywood since DeMille's "North West Mounted Police."

I'm sure "Citizen Kane" had nothing to do with it, but it's odd how many movie sets you'll find nowadays boasting ceilings, once comparatively rare. It's odd, too, with what enthusiasm many directors and cameramen are striving for unusual photographic effects and lighting.

Gregg Toland, who photographed "Kane" for Orson Welles, is shooting the Bette Davis film, "The Little Foxes," and you can look for more cute tricks.

RAIL OFFICIALS BEGIN TALKS ON WAGE INCREASE

Confer With Representatives of 'Non-Operating' Union In Session Today.

(By United Press)

CHICAGO — Railroad officials turned from the "Big Five" labor brotherhoods temporarily today to open negotiations with representatives of 800,000 "non-operating" employes demanding hourly wage increases of 30 to 34 cents.

The carriers' 18-man joint conference committee met with spokesmen for 14 non-operating brotherhoods in negotiations forming the second part of the largest bargaining conference in the industry's history. Management spokesmen have estimated demands of the two groups would raise payrolls $900,000,000 annually, although labor representatives disputed the figure.

Bert M. Jewell, president of the American Federation of Labor railway employes department, headed the labor committee composed of chairman of the non-operating brotherhoods. All except the signalmen and dispatcher unions are affiliated with the AFL.

Management representatives were expected to submit proposals for changes in rules governing working conditions and rates of compensation. They insisted the proposals must be given precedence over wage demands.

Railroad officials estimated the non-operating employes' wage demands, including one for two weeks vacation with pay, would boost their earnings 47 per cent annually. The unions have asked a minimum wage of 70 cents an hour.

Representatives of 350,000 operating employes met yesterday with the carriers' committee to present demands for a 30 per cent wage increase. The committee countered with its proposals for rules changes, which Alvanley Johnston, head of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, said would "materially reduce" wages.

Operating brotherhoods resume negotiations with the carriers' committee Monday.

MAN JAILED IN LUCAS SHOOTING

Victim Wounded on Head After Blast From Shotgun on Main Street of Village.

A 48-year-old Lucas man was held in the county jail today following a shooting on the Lucas Main street last night when Leonard Jones, 25, an employe of the Ohio Brass company, suffered a minor head injury.

Sheriff Frank E. Robinson said the shooting occurred shortly after 11 p. m. and apparently was the result of an argument which started at the home of the suspect.

Jones, who said he would file charges of shooting with intent to kill against the suspect today, told Sheriff Robinson that the man had threatened him earlier in the evening and followed him down the street as he left the house.

The sheriff said a shotgun charge was fired at Jones with one pellet striking him in the back of the head. The shot was removed by a Lucas physician and Jones was able to reurn to work today.

All of Lucas was aroused by the shooting and a crowd soon gathered at the scene of the affray, the sheriff said.

The full charge went over Jones' head or struck the sidewalk behind him and the lone shot probably glanced off another object and struck him, the sheriff added.

Assistant Prosecutor Charles Freehafer said he would question Jones at noon today and charges probably would be filed this afternoon.

The suspect was taken into custody by the sheriff and Deputy J. R. Hetler.

D. S. IRELAND, HEAD OF OLD AGE PENSION OFFICE, DIES AT 58

Stricken with a heart attack as he stood on the back porch of his home at 231 West First street, David S. Ireland, 58, subdivision manager of the state aid for aged office in Mansfield, died almost instantly about 9 p. m. Thursday.

Members of his family said he had complained of a feeling of suffocation and went outside to get some air. He died before a physician could be summoned.

Mr. Ireland had returned from a business trip to Columbus early in the evening. On the way home he told his companion, Howard R. Neuman, an investigator in the aid for aged office, that he had a pain in his chest. He apparently was feeling better when he reached Mansfield, Neuman said.

Mr. Ireland had headed the state office in Mansfield since July 5, 1939. He was reappointed last June 18.

Born in Wilmington, O., Dec. 2, 1882, he lived in Columbus several years before coming to Mansfield. His parents were George M. and Xantha Stillwell Ireland.

His interest in music and dramatics made him known to hundreds of Mansfield Senior high school pupils. He wrote a number of musical selections for student groups and frequently helped to "make up" the youthful participants in plays and operettas at the high school.

Mr. Ireland was a member of the Ohio Republican club and composed a number of the campaign songs for the club. He accompanied it to the national Republican convention in Philadelphia last Summer.

He entertained occasionally at meetings in Mansfield with chalk talks and was well known in this section for his chalk pictures. Several of them decorate the walls of the aid for aged offices in the Richland Trust building.

He was a member of Baku Grotto in Mansfield, York Lodge No. 563, F and A. M., and Mt. Vernon Commandry No. 1, K. T., of Columbus. He also was a member of the First Congregational church in Columbus.

The body will be at the residence on West First street until Sunday morning when it will be taken to the Jones Memorial. Funeral services will be conducted at 1:30 p. m., Sunday at the Memorial. Rev. E. G. Corwin, pastor of the First Methodist church, will officiate. Burial will be in the Lexington cemetery.

Surviving are the wife, Mrs. Elsa Vercoe Ireland, a piano instructor in Mansfield; three sons, George M. and Gilbert of Mansfield and Charles, a student at Wooster college, and one brother, Dr. Charles L. Ireland of Columbus.

Four youths from the Mansfield area who are A.W.O.L. from Camp Shelby, Miss., spent their 13th consecutive day in the Richland county jail today while they are waiting for army officials to decide what to do with them. Capt. Harry Snyder of Mansfield's Battery D at Camp Shelby, suggested that the youths be released and ordered to return to Camp Shelby if they have funds for their transportation. Sheriff Frank E. Robinson found, however, that they had no money for car fare back and decided to keep them here until he receives instruction from Fort Hayes, Columbus. The youths are George Hymes and Steve Moritz of Mansfield; and Bayne Baker, Shelby, Albert Kitzmiller, Crestline.

DRAFT REPORT HITTING NEW DEAL SPENDING

Republican Minority Set To Lash Contrast In Taxes and Appropriations.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Republican members of the house ways and means committee today disclosed that they will file a minority report on the new $3,500,000,000 tax bill which will be "sharply critical of New Deal spending."

Far from taking exception to the revenue measure as a whole, however, the powerful GOP bloc will warn that it is "just a starter on the burdens which will be placed on the American people."

Gist of the Republican argument will be to point out the rapidity with which congress today spends billions of dollars compared with the slow, laboring process entailed in raising a small part of it.

The defense program so far has run to $52,000,000,000 either spent, appropriated or committed, the Republicans say. With very little debate, it takes the house usually only an hour or two to dispose of bills running into billions.

Yesterday the lower body virtually completed action on a new defense spending bill calling for an outlay of more than $8,000,000,000, and its passage Monday is assured.

The ways and means committee, however, has spent more than three months drawing up a tax bill which will raise $3,500,000,000, it was pointed out. This measure will be fought on the floor, and with passage assured at least a week will be spent in debating it.

"We will soon be spending $100,000,000 every day, while we will be collecting as taxes only $30,000,000 a day," Rep. Jenkins (R) Ohio, a member of the committee declared.

"If the people can hardly pay $30,000,00 a day, how can they pay $100,000,000? In face of this threatening situation, the New Deal marches merrily on scattering money to the winds."

The Republicans, however, have shied away from criticising defense spending. But Jenkins declared that the department of agriculture, far from curtailing, was getting $142,000,000 more than it did last year, and that the independent offices appropriation bill was up $294,000,000.

Corps Urges Army Set Up Training Camps for Women

TOLEDO —(U.P.)— Six hundred members of the Willys-Overland company Women's Defense corps today declared themselves in favor of a "draftee army" for women and urged army officials to establish training camps for women.

A resolution forwarded to General George C. Marshall, U. S. army chief of staff, stated that "many semi-military services can be efficiently performed by women, if the government will set up proper training facilities and enact legislation to create a 'selective service' for women."

Establishment of the camps under direct army supervision, would free thousands of men for combat duty, the resolution said.

Stating that the "semi-military" duties "can and should be taken over by the women in this time of great emergency," the resolution said that women could be used as ambulance and supply truck operators, do field kitchen and first aid work, supervise civilian evacuation practice and do telephone and telegraph line repair work.

BARN BURNS AT FREDERICKTOWN

FREDERICKTOWN — Spontaneous combustion of new hay was blamed today for a fire which destroyed a large barn on the farm of Clarence Awwiller, two miles east of here yesterday afternoon.

Awwiller estimated the loss at $7,000, part of which is covered by insurance.

The fire was discovered by Awwiller's six-year-old son, Charles.

Approximately 35 volunteers poured water on the house and adjoining buildings to protect them from being fired by the shower of sparks.

Awwiller said the loss included this year's crop of hay; 300 bushels of corn and all his farm machinery.

It's pots and pans night at the Fairground tonight when the Mansfield Braves meet the Lima Pandas in an Ohio State league game.

Anyone bringing an aluminum pot or pan for national defense will be admitted to the game for 10 cents.

It's also ladies' night, and the women will be admitted for 10 cents, but they also are asked to bring their pots and pans for this patriotic contribution.

The Mansfield baseball club is making a real sacrifice in arranging the pot and pan night, and the baseball fans should take advantage of this opportunity to see the game at the low price of 10 cents by bringing their old pots and pans.

The club hopes to make a good showing in this contribution of aluminum for national defense, but it can hardly hope to make any money on the 10-cent admission fee.

So it's up to the baseball fans to make this contribution worth while.

Pots and pans are an old story with the ball fans. They take pot shots at the umpires, and put the men in blue on the pan night after night. Tonight's their chance to do the same thing with Hitler.

I never knew it to fail. Put a deadline on anything, and there's always someone coming in after the bell.

Several entries were received for the News-Journal tennis tournament after the deadline. But they can't be used now. The pairings have been made and the tournament is under way.

Entry fees will be returned to late filers, with the hope that next year they'll not postpone their entries to the last minute.

We'd have been glad to have them in the tournament lineup, but it's too late now.

M'Neill Upset In Tourney

Drops Quarter-Final Tilt To Schroeder.

SEA BRIGHT, N. J.—(AP)—The enigma that is Donald L. McNeill, tennis champion of the United States, remains unsolved.

"For the life of me, I don't know what's wrong. Your guess is as good as mine." This from McNeill himself. It doesn't take an expert to pick out glaring flaws in McNeill's technique. McNeill knows there's plenty wrong with it, but no one yet has been able to offer an explanation for the disintegration of a game that carried the modest, soft-spoken Oklahoman to the top of the heap last year.

Some say it's a loss of confidence, but McNeill says not. "I feel better than I've ever felt before," he says. "When I go out on the court, I feel I can win and I play to win, but the shots just don't go where I want them to."

* * *

Yesterday, in the quarter-final round of the 54th annual Sea Bright tournament, McNeill fell victim of the tournament's biggest upset. He was beaten by 20-year-old Ted Schroeder in straight sets, 6-3, 7-5.

* * *

McNeill acknowledged he was pretty discouraged, but he's far from ready to admit that his game is beyond salvage.

* * *

McNeill wasn't the only victim of the switch to grass, for while he was being defeated, Frankie Parker was being crushed by Wayne Sabin, 6-2, 6-4.

The runaway, Imperial Nick, also collided with Iron Sande, ridden by Troy Everett of Anderson, causing Everett a broken leg and head injuries.

Mint Flavor and Imperial Nick were destroyed because of their injuries. Iron Sande was killed outright.

Indians Tackle Red Sox

Wavering Tribe Starts Fight For Second Place.

BOSTON —(AP)— Still reeling from three beatings in New York that put them out of the pennant race, the Indians encountered the Red Sox today in a battle for second place.

Cleveland went into the three-tussle series five games ahead of the upcoming Hub city club and 10 games in back of the torrid Yankees.

Kenny Keltner's home run, his 17th of the year, in the eighth inning produced Cleveland's only tally. He also had a double and Hal Trosky lined two singles.

Jim Bagby pitched the entire game, giving up only seven hits but again the Cleveland attack failed.

Bob Feller will make a second attempt for his 20th victory tomorrow.

Cards Pass Dodgers

Fighting Redbirds Go Extra Innings To Beat Giants.

(By United Press)

NEW YORK—The tenacious St. Louis Cardinals, who never know when they're licked, occupied the National league throne room today.

The Cards downed the Giants, 3-2, in 10 innings yesterday for their fourth extra inning victory in their last nine games. With the Dodgers idle, the Red Birds picked up half a game to break their first place tie.

Going into the seventh the Cards were beaten, 2-0, and going into the ninth they were behind, 2 to 1.

The Cards knotted the count in the ninth, and then won in the tenth after stopping the Giants with the winning tally on third.

Johnny Wittig had the Cards shut out until the seventh when Jimmy Brown, Estel Crabtree and Walker Cooper singled in a run. With two out in the ninth the Cards roared back to tie the score and almost won in that frame. Creepy Crespi and Terry Moore singled, and then Johnny Hopp doubled to right, with Mel Ott failing to make a leaping catch. Crespi scored the tying run but Moore was thrown out at the plate, Ott to Jurges to Danning.

The Giants got Dick Bartell around to third with two out in the tenth but Ernie White who came in to face the Giants for the third straight day fanned John Rucker. Previously White had fanned Pinch-hitter Hartnett. Then the Cards triumphed on Slaughter's single and Jimmy Brown's double off Hal Schumacher. It was White's third win in three days over the Giants and his tenth of the season.

Pittsburgh moved into a fourth place tie with the Giants by putting on a ninth inning rally which gave them a 3-2 victory over the Phillies. It was Pittsburgh's fifth straight and ninth win in their last 12 games.

Babe Dahlgren's 14th homer enabled the Cubs to nose out the Braves, 5-4, after Chicago had spotted Boston a four-run lead. Claude Passeau was knocked out in the first inning but Jake Mooty, who pitched the last five innings, stopped Boston cold.

Connie Mack's Athletics defeated the Browns for the third straight day, 9-7, and climbed into fifth place over the stumbling Tigers.

Dropping their seventh straight game, the Tigers slumped into sixth place. Leading 5-2 in the ninth, the Tigers collapsed and the Senators scored four runs to beat Detroit for the 11th time in 15 games. The victory enabled the Senators to climb out of the cellar.

The Red Sox clouted out an 11-1 victory over the White Sox behind Mickey Harris' six-hit pitching. Jim Tabor's 11th homer with the bases loaded was the winning punch.

Harmon, 'Evvy' Poll Heavy Vote

CHICAGO—(INS)—Tom Harmon and his Michigan backfield teammate, Forrest Evashevski, were running one-two today in the national poll to select a collegiate eleven to face the program champion Chicago Bears in the annual all-star football classic in Soldier field Aug. 28.

Harmon led all candidates with 614,704 votes for a halfback's berth on the collegiate squad, and Evashevski was second among all candidates and first among quarterbacks with 609,651 votes.

Tennis--Or Fashion--Tourney?

The Marlowe sisters of the tennis courts went to Seabright, N. J., to play in the tourney there. But when the photographer caught them in their hotel room one day, he wondered if they weren't in a fashion show instead of a tennis event. He soon found out that Dame Fashion also has her say in tennis. Mercedes Marlowe is at left and Helen at right.

Association Race Tightens

Columbus and Louisville Gain on Minneapolis.

(By International News Service)

The mad scramble that is the American Association flag race this year was further tightened today with Minneapolis enjoying only a one and one-half game lead over second-place Columbus which, in turn, was only a game ahead of Louisville.

Louisville cut the Miller's lead last night by defeating them in their own park, 5 to 1. Columbus, meanwhile, was edging Milwaukee, 6 to 5. In other games, St. Paul defeated Indianapolis, 5 to 1, in the opener of a double bill but dropped the second encounter, 4 to 3. Toledo set back Kansas City by a 7 to 5 score.

Emerson Dickman gave the Kels only seven hits in the eight innings he worked for the Colonels. Andres hit for the circuit for Louisville while Babe Barna accounted for the Millers' lone score with a four-bagger.

Columbus scored four runs in the last two frames to come from behind for its victory over Milwaukee. Bert Haas and Harry Walker hit homers for the winners as Harry Brecheen got credit for the victory.

Ray Starr accounted for his 18th victory of the season for Indianapolis by hurling two and two-thirds of the 11-inning nightcap against St. Paul. The Indians never got started in the seven-inning twilight opener as the Saints scored three times in the first.

Johnny Marcum, who hurled seven innings in the 102-degree temperature at Kansas City, got credit for the Mud Hens win over the Blues. Chartak, of Toledo, with a homer and three singles, was the leading hitter of the game.

Extends Winning Series to Eight

Prospect Park softball club took it's eighth straight win of the season last night as St. John's ten bowed to an 8-5 defeat at Prospect.

* * *

Stickler and Tingley led the victors' assault, getting three out of four apiece. Both belted circuit clouts in the fray.

* * *

G. Uhlich connected for a circuit clout as St. John's club was held to scattered hits, Augustine and G. Uhlich leading the batsmen with two out of four.

Play for Second Half Commercial Crown

Tappans' softball club and the Athletic Supplies will meet in a title determining tilt at North Lake park today.

The game, a first round postponed game, will determine the second half champions of the Commercial league. A victory for Tappans will give them undisputed title. Loss to the Supplies will throw the league standings into a three way tie and play-off for the crown.

N. and W. Coals, the Supplies and Tappans will share in the title-play-off should Tappans take tonight's game.

Brooklyn Goes Collegiate, Organizes Cheering Section

By HARRY FERGUSON

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—It couldn't happen any place in the world except in Brooklyn.

It is going to happen on Aug. 11, and maybe it isn't quite cricket to tip off the New York Giants as to what they are going to be up against when they go into Ebbets Field that day to joust with their mortal enemies, the Dodgers.

The news leaked out today that the Brooklyn fans have decided to rally to the aid of their beloved bums with an organized cheering section such as you can see any Saturday afternoon in the Yale bowl during the football season. What better day could they pick than the one in which the hated Giants invade the sacred sod of Flatbush?

Activity already is under way. The yells and cheers are being mimeographed, four cheer leaders have been appointed and it has been decided to make the knot-hole gang—a group of brass-voiced youngsters—the nucleus of the cheering section.

With characteristic sportsmanship and sense of fair play where the Giants are involved, the Brooklyn fans have decided not to confine their yells merely to applause for the beloved bums. There will be two kinds of cheers: (A) Pro-Dodger and (B) anti-Giant.

* * *

Considerable spade work already has been done on yells denouncing William Harold Terry, manager of the Giants who once uttered the deathless phrase, "Are the Dodgers still in the League?" And who has not been allowed to forget it for one minute.

The first time Terry pokes a cautious head out of the Giants' dugout he will be greeted with: "Rowdy-dow-dow, Jack and Jill, "Raspberries for Memphis Bill "Boo-ooo-oo-oo-oo." ... ...

Carl Hubbell probably is one of the most popular men in baseball—so long as he stays out of Ebbets Field. But if the veteran southpaw is so unfortunate as to draw the pitching assignment for the Giants on the afternoon of Aug. 11, the Dodger fans will be ready for him:

"Ruba dub-dub, blast Old Hub,
"Send him to the showers.
"Knock him silly, Dolf Camilli,
"Victory is our."

Hogan Moves To St. Louis

Seeks More Prize Money In $7,500 Open Tourney.

ST. PAUL, Minn. —(U.P.)— Ben Hogan, Hershey, Pa., sharpshooter, was the man to beat today as 200 professional and amateur golfers opened the first round of the annual $7,500 St. Paul Open.

Hogan boosted his season's prize earnings to $11,517 by winning the Chicago Open last Sunday and is the year's top money winner.

Other favorites for the first place prize of $1,600 were Sammy Snead, Hot Springs, Va., 1938 winner; Dick Metz, Oak Park, Ill., 1939 champion; and long-hitting Jimmy Thomson, Chicopee, Mass.

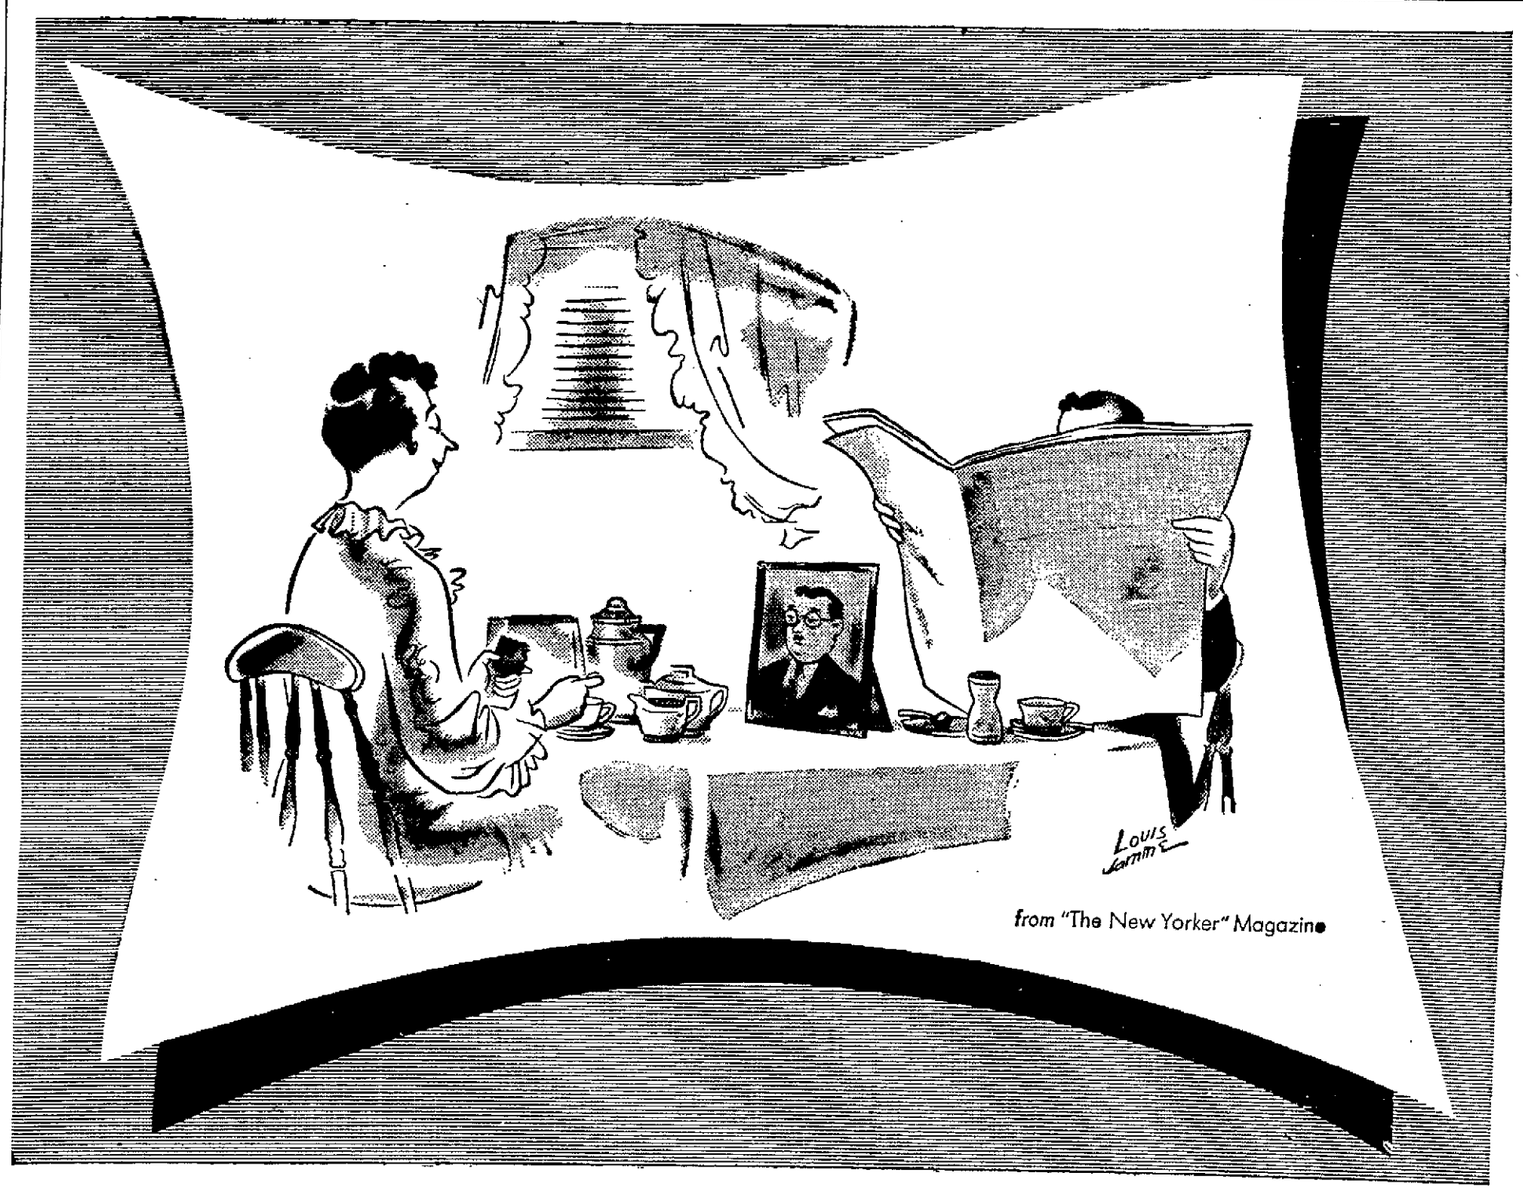
The 72-hole contest over Keller course calls for 18 holes today and 18 holes tomorrow with the 64 low scorers qualifying for the final 36 holes Sunday. Prizes totaling $7,500 will be paid to the 30 with the best scores.

Snead turned in the best pre-tournament round yesterday when, competing with Patty Berg, Minneapolis, for national women's champion, in a pro-ladies event, he shot a 66, six under par. The score gave him $100 first prize in the pros' division.



The Petulant Mrs. Pentwhistle

Ordinarily a sweet-tempered little lady, Mrs. Pentwhistle can get pretty petulant at times . . . times like this, for instance, when she begins to feel that she has a rival for her husband's attention.

We can't say we blame her much. Table-talk with a photograph can't be very stimulating.

But cheer up, Mrs. Pentwhistle, Mr. P's passion for the paper is perfectly normal . . . just as normal as yours and that of millions of other Pentwhistles throughout the country. It comes over men and women, young and old, every day in the week . . . simply because the news is indispensable in people's lives.

Day in and day out the newspaper grips the attention of the largest audience in the world.

(While you're waiting your turn at that paper, Mrs. Pentwhistle, you might ponder the fact that every weekday the 37,000,000 families in the United States and Canada buy, and read, 43,300,000 newspapers . . . and every Sunday they buy, and read, 33,000,000 newspapers.)

That's what makes the newspaper such a vital and profitable medium for advertisers. And today, when the news is more important to more people than ever before, the newspaper is naturally a more vital, more profitable advertising medium than ever before.

THEATERS

Conscription Comedy.

"Caught in the Draft," Bob Hope's hilarious vehicle showing conscription's lighter side, opens Saturday at the Ohio. Hope plays the part of a movie actor who lands in the army through a practical joke, but once in, decides to make the colonel's daughter say "yes." Lynne Overman and Eddie Bracken are cast as Hope's cohorts who take a crack at every job in camp from peeling potatoes to parachute jumping. They even soften up the hard-boiled sergeant. Tricky new tunes from Louis Alter and Frank Loesser enliven the production.

Waterfront Story.

Wallace Beery plunges into the most hectic screen romance of his career when he gets mixed up with the daughter of a ship chandler in "Barnacle Bill," opening Saturday at the Madison. Marjorie Main, who appeared with Beery in "Wyoming," plays the sweetheart of the story that has San Pedro's fish harbor as its locale. Leo Carrillo and Virginia Weidler are in the cast. "Kisses For Breakfast," the second film, presents Dennis Morgan as an amnesia victim in love with Shirley Ross and Jane Wyatt.

Gaming Background.

Told against a background of night clubs and gaming tables that personify life in Las Vegas the current attraction at the Ritz, "Las Vegas Nights," has Comedian Bert Wheeler at the head of a cast featuring Tommy Dorsey's orchestra, Phil Regan and Constance Moore. Dealing with the efforts of a vaudeville troupe to collect the inheritance of one of its members the comedy introduces some snappy dance and musical numbers. Tex Riter in an action drama "Rainbow Over the Range," is the second production.

University Drama.

Life in a mid-western university town just before the turn of the century is depicted in "Cheers For Miss Bishop," showing at the Park with Martha Scott, William Gargan, Sidney Blackmer and Donald Douglas in the leading roles. Sixty years are spanned in the story that tells of a beautiful woman's three-cornered romance and the way the passing years affect the town and campus. The play was adapted from the novel by Bess Streeter Aldrich. "Convoy," with Clive Brook and Judy Campbell, is the companion feature.

Friendly Enemies.

Fighting each other tooth and nail on the surface but secretly saving each other's neck on the sly, Frank Craven and Edgar Buchanan play the friendly enemies in "The Richest Man in Town," showing at the Majestic. Craven is cast as the banker and Buchanan, the country editor. Eileen O'Hearn makes her film debut as the heart interest and Roger Pryor, the city slicker, out to swindle the citizens. "Pirates on Horseback," with William Boyd as "Hopalong Cassidy," is the co-attraction.

ON THE JOB

DUNCANNON, Pa.—(INS)—Assistant Fire Chief Samuel L. Miller can point to at least one fire he distinguished promptly. While playing cards in the firehouse smoke was seen rising from Miller's coat pocket. He shoved his hand into the pocket and soon had the blaze under control.

LUCKIEST CAT

HOLLYWOOD — (INS) — There have been lots of lucky dogs but Moonglow, month-old Siamese kitten, rates herself the luckiest cat in Hollywood. One of five kittens rented for use in scenes of Jane Withers' "A Very Young Lady," Moonglow stole a lot of scenes and won many additional closeups. And now the director, Harold Schuster, has bought Moonglow and given her to Jane, to dwell in catly splendor for the rest of her life.

CHAPTER XVII

"What else can I do? I know when I'm beaten."

"That's the first step," Malone told her, "to becoming a very clever woman."

She wished he would drop this pretense, this play of words. She would have preferred that he talked and acted in his true role. She wondered what he had done? Forgery? Robbery? Perhaps, even murder! She would not ask. She would spare herself that, Jimmy had said he thought he recognized Malone. Apparently he had seen his picture in a newspaper. In spite of the plastic surgery, there must have been a trace of resemblance left.

"Remember," he told her, "I'm watching you. I wouldn't want this to turn out to be a shotgun wedding—if you know what I mean."

Doris understood the threat only too well. She must play her part very carefully from now on.

"The situation couldn't be any worse," she told herself as she went down to her cabin to get a wrap. But as she approached her door she heard voices. One was May Whittier's—the other, Jimmy Allen's.

Doris stopped short, unable to avoid hearing. Stunned and surprised, she had only a moment to wonder what Jimmy was doing in her room before she heard May's voice. "I'm telling you for your own good, Jimmy. After all, I'm practically part of the family. I don't want to see you tricked twice . . . Doris told me that she would do anything to get out of going back to work. She told me she had decided when she took this trip that she was going to find a rich husband, and that happens to be you."

A pause, and then May's voice again, more intimate.

"You know I wouldn't lie to you, Jimmy! Doris is marrying you for your money. She told me so!"

Scarcely knowing what she was doing, Doris turned and walked away from her cabin door. May's words singing in her ears: "Doris is marrying you for your money. She told me so . . ." How could any girl be low enough to say such a thing? Would Jimmy believe her?

Doris went on deck and sank down in her chair. She was beyond anger, beyond tears. This was the last straw in a series of events which seemed to be leading direct to the breaking up of her romance with Jimmy Allen. Even if Jimmy did not listen to May, there was still George Malone. But Doris would have preferred to have Jimmy think she did not love him than that she had been trying to marry him for financial reasons. May Whittier had said that Doris took the trip with only one idea in mind—to marry a rich man.

"How could she?" Doris wondered dully. "How could she tell such a lie?"

A cold wind swept the deck, reminding Doris that they would soon be in New York. She would be glad when this terrible voyage was over. She had been warned of the intrigue and gossip on shipboard, and she had only laughed. Little did she know that she herself would soon be involved in such a vicious web of circumstances.

An hour passed. What had become of Jimmy? Why didn't he come to find her? Proudly Doris waited. She would not pursue him. If he believed May's story, there was nothing for her to do. Her lips were sealed. When Jimmy knew that George Malone was her father he would have reason to believe May. It all fit together too perfectly. The fact that it was not the truth made it no less plausible.

Passionately Doris wished she had never met Jimmy Allen. Maybe it would have been better if she had married Roy Johnston and never taken this trip. Maybe she would have been wiser to stay in Buenos Aires and accept the love and protection of Ricardo Torres. Almost any course she might have chosen would have turned out better than this one. If she had not won the radio contest she would have been spared all this grief. She would have still been at Klane's basement feeling sorry for herself. Well, she had learned that there was worse heartaches than work and poverty and boredom. There was the heartache of losing the man you loved. The humiliation of discovering that your father was a crook—was wanted by the police.

Where was Jimmy? Almost ten o'clock and she had not seen him since dinner. Doris decided to go to bed.

* * *

May was in the cabin brushing her hair. She greeted Doris with a friendly "Hello! How come you're going to bed so early?"

Doris was amazed at her nerve. With sudden resolution she faced the other girl. "I heard what you said to Jimmy."

May's eyebrows lifted. "Eavesdropping?"

"I came down to get my wrap," Doris said evenly. "I couldn't help hearing."

May shrugged. She went on brushing her hair. "Well, I have a right to my opinion. After all, Jimmy and I are old friends."

"Oh, stop it!" Doris cried in disgust. "You know you lied. I have never said that I wanted a rich husband, or anything else that you told Jimmy, and you know it!"

"So what?" inquired May airily.

Such nerve! When May herself was seeking a wealthy husband. "He didn't believe you!" Doris insisted.

"Oh, no? That happens to be the one thing Jimmy Allen is afraid of. He'll never marry you now."

Doris removed her make-up with trembling fingers. It seemed incredible that Jimmy could think she was no better than his showgirl wife who had boasted of tricking him into marriage.

"He couldn't believe it!" she cried.

"Why don't you ask him?" was May's response as she got into bed and settled herself comfortably beneath the blankets.

"Maybe I will," Doris retorted. "And I'll tell him the truth."

"If you mean about me, it won't do any good. You forget he trusts me. Our families have been friends all our lives. And why should he trust you? All he knows about your background is that you worked in Klane's basement.

Doris wanted to slap May's pretty face. But what was the use? What was the use of anything now?

"If there's any justice," she cried furiously, "you'll be sorry for this!"

"Why should I when everything's turned out just the way I wanted it to?" May's smugness irritated Doris almost beyond endurance.

She snapped off the light as she got into her own bed.

* * *

Two more days to New York. One terrible day had passed. That was something to be grateful for. Every day seemed to bring new disillusion to the girl who had gambled five thousand dollars on a search for adventure—for romance.

"What an adventure!" Doris thought drearily. "What evil star ever brought me on this trip?"

She wondered what had happened to Bonnie back in Detroit. Had she married Don yet? And what about Roy Johnston? Would he be willing to go on being friends after her refusal to marry him? She would need friends now more than ever. Yet when she exposed George Malone—Charles Newton, her father—would she have any friends left? Could she get a job?

Morning came at last and the two girls dressed without speaking. May hummed a little tune as she donned her best looking pair of slacks and applied her make-up carefully.

Jimmy was not at the breakfast table. Doris ordered orange juice and coffee but was unable to drink either. She sat quietly waiting for the others to finish, wondering how people could eat so heartily, laugh, find so much pleasure in this morning which was the most miserable of her life.

After breakfast she asked her room steward, "Have you seen Mr. Allen?"

He shook his head. "Not this morning, Miss Newton."

Doris paced the deck.

She was sick of this deck, this ship, the same gray-blue water, the endless sky, the same faces, the officers, the deck chairs, the lounge. Day after day the same monotony, interspersed with periods of rapture when things had seemed all right, always followed by disillusion.

Twelve days from Rio? It seemed a million years. The events that had crowded themselves into the space of these days had been the events of a lifetime. The course of her fate had changed entirely since she boarded this ship. How long ago it seemed that she stood on this same deck waving good-bye to Ricardo! Wearing his orchids! Dear Ricardo! What a pity she could not have loved him and stayed in Argentina. Still, if her father had really been following her in South America, as he told her, he would have attempted to blackmail Ricardo instead of Jimmy Allen. No matter where she went, no matter whom she married, she would never be free from George Malone.

As if her thoughts had summoned him, Malone appeared at her side.

"Where's Allen?" he inquired.

"I don't know. I haven't seen him since last night."

"You haven't double-crossed me, have you?" His steel-like fingers closed upon her arm.

"Let go of me!" she demanded so furiously that he relaxed his grip.

"What's happened?" he repeated. "You may as well tell me now. I'll find out sooner or later."

* * *

Doris almost enjoyed telling him. At least May Whittier's lie had put an end to Malone's plot.

"Someone else has beaten you at your own game," she told him.

"What do you mean?"

"May Whittier told Jimmy that I was marrying him for his money. I haven't seen him since. Apparently he believed her. No matter what you tell him now, it will be useless."

"You seem quite pleased with the situation," Malone said suspiciously.

"I am! I'd rather lose Jimmy a thousand times over than trick him into your little plan!"

He laughed. "So you had no intention of going through with my proposition? Is that right?"

"That's right," Doris said. "And it doesn't make any difference now what you do."

"That's where you're wrong."

"You don't mean you'd tell Jimmy who you are now? You wouldn't gain anything by that since we're not going to be married anyway."

"I, too, realize when I'm defeated. I am not a fool, Doris. But there are other ways to accomplish my purpose with our young friend."

What plan had his evil mind conceived now?

"What do you mean?" she said evenly.

"You don't expect me to tell you, do you? You'll know soon enough."

He turned, laughing, and walked back into the lounge.

Doris clutched the rail, and her knuckles showed white beneath the tender flesh. She felt as if she could not bear any more.

No sooner had Malone disappeared than Jimmy Allen rounded the corner of the deck.

He looked older, more mature than she had ever seen him. For the first time, she noticed the fine line that ran from nose to mouth. His jaw was set, and the blue eyes were cold as he said in a low, controlled voice, "I hate to tell you this, Doris, but you might as well know now. Our marriage is off."

Missouri Town Will Honor Its Famed Giantess

GORIN, Mo.—(INS)—This little town of Gorin intends to perpetuate the memory of its most famous citizen, Ella Ewing—eight feet, four inches of womanhood.

"The Missouri Giantess" died 28 years ago after touring the United States and Canada for many years as a circus attraction. Prior to her death, she had settled down at Gorin in a specially-built house which she had erected because she was tired of putting up with the inconveniences of regular sized dwellings.

Plans to honor her memory already are under consideration by the Gorin Civic club, and include conversion of her famous estate into the Ella Ewing park. The club also intends refurnishing the home with the huge bed, chairs and other furniture used by the giantess.

At the time of her death, Miss Ewing weighed 280 pounds, and 11 yards of material were needed to make her dresses.

AKRON CHAMP DEFEATED

AKRON—(INS)—Johnny Zupic's hopes of winning a second straight Akron district golf championship were ended today when he was defeated 1 up in 19 holes by former titleholder Paul Segerlund of Maplecrest in the quarter-finals at Barberton Country club.

DON'T YOU BELIEVE IT!

The word seems to be going around that we are out of cars—

"Don't you believe it!" We haven't too many and some types are scarce, but we can supply reasonable requirements.

Dodge dealers in other cities are daily calling us up and asking us for cars, but of course we would be very foolish to let any go under the present circumstances. Yes, we still have some!

MILD RECOVERY SHOWN TODAY IN MART DIVISIONS

Some Leaders Fail To Get Out of Doldrums But Surveys Cheer Boardrooms.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Mild recoveries cropped up in most stock market divisions today but many leaders failed to work out of the doldrums.

In early dealings plus signs were tacked on General Motors, Chrysler, N. Y. Central, Western Union and Woolworth.

Lacking much rising vigor were American Telephone, DuPont and Douglas Aircraft.

The brightening business scene and persistent hopes the Reds would effectively stop the Nazi invasion remained as sustaining influences.

Boardrooms derived some cheer from surveys stressing the high rate of consumer spending throughout the nation.

Studied was the compilation of Dun & Bradstreet estimating the country's retail sales this week averaged 20 to 24 per cent above the comparable period a year ago.

As Clevelanders Studied Mansfield's Safetytown

A delegation of Cleveland women, accompanied by city officials and representatives of the Michigan highway department yesterday came to Mansfield to inspect the Safetytown project for teaching children of pre-school age traffic safety with the idea of establishing similar kindergartens in Cleveland and Detroit. The upper left photo shows Miss Betty Braden, Woodland school teacher, giving little Thelma Poorman, 6, of 155 Gibson avenue, an explanation of the stop sign. Upper right shows the new asphalt layout at Prospect park, one of the two financed by the Mansfield Police Recreation club. Lower left shows, from left to right, Samuel Newman, Cleveland park commissioner, Mrs. Marie Fry, and Mrs. E. F. Carran, representatives of the Federated Women's Clubs of Cleveland, and Capt. Arthur Roth, head of the Cleveland police department's juvenile bureau, inspecting the miniature traffic light at the "town." Lower right is Patrolman Frend C. Boals, originator of the Safetytown idea, pointing out a phase of the project to A. F. Malo, Michigan state highway traffic engineer, left, and Frank E. Bubna, Cleveland properties director. In the center Patrolman Boals is shown with Tiny Petcy McLaughlin in one of the toy cars used for teaching traffic safety.
